Reward offered in giant pumpkin theft

Will the Great Pumpkin be on hand for the Wilmington Horribles Parade this year?

Backyard gardener Hugh Wiberg has posted a $100 reward for the return of a 450-pound Atlantic Giant pumpkin, stolen from his garden on Saturday night.

Wiberg discovered the theft about 7:30 Sunday morning. He couldn't believe his eyes at first, but it was true. It was quite plain to see that the pumpkin had been rolled out of the garden and apparently into a truck. There were tire tracks on the lawn.

The theft has prompted Wiberg to make a decision. He will raise no more pumpkins in Wilmington. This is the second time his pumpkin has been stolen. Next year, he will have a garden in a nearby town.

"My problem is that I'm a marked man," said Wiberg, who has been growing giant gourds for about 15 years. Newspaper stories and television appearances have made him too well-known. He has also made several regular appearances on the Dave Maynard show on WBZ radio, fielding gardening questions.

"I've missed planting my favorite vegetable," he said. "Next year, I'm going to have a mess of peas you won't believe."

For many years, he grew the "squmpkin", which he developed by crossing a Big Max pumpkin with a Giant Hungarian squash. The problem with squmpkins was that there was a chance of getting a green gourd, instead of an orange one.

The pastime of growing large pumpkins has now become, well, a sport. Competition is held at fairs in ten locations in the U.S., Canada and England, under the supervision of a group known as the World Pumpkin Confederation.

Wiberg's 1987 pumpkin was among 28 registered for weighing on Monday at the Topsfield Fair.

It was to have been harvested on Saturday morning at Wiberg's annual "pumpkin breakfast." Without the pumpkin, there will be no breakfast.

After the judging at the fair, the pumpkin is then donated to the Wilmington Recreation Dept. for the Horribles Parade.

Pumpkin growing is serious business for Wiberg, who has published a book on backyard gardening. To assure healthy, vigorous pumpkin plants, he applied a fungicide to the soil a few weeks before planting this spring, to eliminate disease spores and root chewing insects. He also sprays on spring and summer evenings to ward off the moth of the squash vine borer.

He has yet to come up with a thief repellent, but is hoping to develop a few volunteer pumpkin searchers, by offering the reward.

Even if the pumpkin has been smashed, he wants the seeds. The seed for the missing pumpkin is of championship stock, and Wiberg every year sends out seeds to thousands of people.

Anyone having a lead on the whereabouts of the pumpkin may call the Town Crier at 658-2346.

Halloween humor

"This is the last person who built without a permit," joked Peggy Tarantino of the Wilmington building inspector's office. The office is already decorated for Halloween with a cardboard coffin and skeleton.

Wilmington recommended as housing partner

by Arlene Surprenant
Wilmington has been recommended as a Massachusetts Housing Partnership Community. Under the MHP program, once a town or city is accepted as a partner with the state, it becomes eligible for special CDAG and other grants to help build affordable housing.

Owen Cardwell, regional director of MHP, told members of the Affordable Housing Task Force Monday night that he recommended acceptance of the town's application.

"We applaud the efforts that you're making," he said, adding he and other state officials were pleased with Wilmington's progress in developing its own low cost homes. Cardwell offered the state's services and technical assistance toward this end.

It is expected town officials will have to wait at least two to four weeks for the application process to be complete. The time frame for constructing and occupying new housing is uncertain. In the past, said Cardwell, the process from beginning to end took three to four years. In Lincoln where a town supported project is underway using state funds, the process so far has taken a year.

Wilmington task force members hope to utilize two large town owned parcels to develop a large number of affordable homes. This would be in addition to other smaller sites. When chairman Jim Stewart asked if the town could develop a project making all units or homes 100 percent affordable, Cardwell replied the state favors "balanced housing" with perhaps a mix of Chapter 705 and elderly units. Where towns have gone with 100 percent affordable units, he added, the project has contained no more than 28 units.

Cardwell explained when towns apply for funding through the MHP program, two factors weigh heavily with the state: local approval and the development's readiness to move into the construction phase. He also assured members the funds would be available and would not dry up.

During the brief meeting, Stewart told those in attendance several Wilmington officials were invited to attend a meeting on the controversial 774 law. The meeting, which is being hosted by the Billerica selectmen, is slated for Wednesday night in Billerica. Other nearby communities were invited to attend to discuss the law and ways it could be amended to make it fairer to all. Though he felt some change is necessary, Stewart said he didn't intend to "go in with the attitude of our guns are loaded to shoot down 774."

Small crowd says no in a loud voice

The turnout was amazingly light, but the message was strong. The idea of a sludge plant in North Wilmington found little favor in a hearing held last Wednesday night by the Mass. Water Resources Authority (MWRA) at the Wilmington Town Hall.

Only about 40 persons attended the hearing, and 11 of them were from Andover. The site of the proposed plant is off Andover Street, not far from the town line.

The hearing was opened by MWRA Executive Director Paul Levy, who explained that the state had been found in violation of the clean water act for dumping sewage sludge into Boston Harbor.

Len Cawley, community relations coordinator, said the MWRA was holding the hearing "to get that local knowledge that you know."

The first feedback came from Rep. Jim Miceli. "I don't want you to be lulled into complacency thinking there is no opposition by the size of the crowd," he said. "This land was rezoned Monday night. I think that's why you don't see many people here."

A special town meeting rezoned about 44 acres of the 50 acre site from R60 to R20, to allow a developer to build homes on lots of 20,000 square feet.

Miceli told the MWRA that he'd much rather see them spend a bit more money and locate the facility in a less developed area.

He spoke of Route 125 being a congested corridor, and how the state had recently spent a million dollars to rebuild Ballardvale Street, "and it still doesn't work."

Water Commissioner Arthur Smith cited a half dozen points of opposition, including the devaluing of taxable property, possible effects on the water supply, proximity to 35 homes, and a horrendous traffic problem at Route 125 and Andover Street.

William X. Wall, a city councillor from Lawrence and former a state senator, spoke in opposition. "Airborne putrid odors from sewage sludge or toxic metals would place an unhealthy burden on the people of Andover," he said.

"You can't convince me those things are nice to have around," said Andover resident Tom Poucher. "I've moved three times to get away from this." He spoke of having lived near a plant in Michigan, and then in New York. Having just spent $250,000 for a house on Foster's Pond, he was not anxious to have a sludge plant built anywhere near it.

Steve Ellis directed some questions on volume of materials to Melanie Thomas, director of the residuals management program. One statistic brought out was that a sludge plant would require 20 trucks a day, with another 20 trucks if an incinerator were to be built.

Ellis told of his experience with sludge incinerator in Philadelphia. He said that it is impossible to go by that incinerator with your windows open. "And that's one of the model projects!" he said.

Arthur Smith questioned how much use there could be for the composted sludge pointing out that there wasn't much golf course construction underway. He favored dumping it on an island in Boston Harbor, where it could be transported by barge. He pointed to the high cost of trucking if it had to be brought inland.

Town Manager Buzz Stapczynski called the intersection of Route 125 and Andover Street "a high hazard intersection," citing traffic counts and projections.

He also asked if there were any "real live examples we can go see, touch and smell?"

The town manager asked what incentives the MWRA might be offering for communities where sludge facilities would be built.

Levy said that this would be negotiated on a case by case basis.

Smith made an observation on state-of-the-art equipment, pointing out that it can be risky to be using the first equipment of its type. He wanted to know if other plants of this type were operating. "We don't want to take any chances with this goop!" he said.

Levy said that there were plants, but not of this size.

Miceli questioned the reliability of the plant, asking if there was a possibility that it might not do all it was supposed to.

Levy said that one of the requirements of the site was to have storage for six months worth of sludge.

Selectman Jim Stewart presented a list of objections.

Ellis asked if the site could be tied into the MWRA sewer.

"If we let these people in, we've just lost a $5 million lawsuit," said Stapczynski. He was referring to a case where Robert Corey was suing the town for access to the sewer, since his land was not provided sewer service by means of the Ballardvale Street sewer. The town manager was adamant that all sewer connections had to be according to the master plan of the Water and Sewer Commissioners.

Size is everything
Compared to Hugh Wiberg's missing monster 450-pound pumpkin, this 85-pounder is a midget. To a couple of Yorkshire Terriers, though, it is bigger than life. It was grown by Greg McHugh of Salem Street, North Wilmington.

I would like to take this opportunity to thank the people of Wilmington who voted to rezone my property at the recent Special town meeting.

However, I am disappointed that my initial request that would supply at least 12 affordable single family house lots to the town at no cost was disapproved.

Why didn't those who advocate affordable housing in this town stand up for those in town who need it?

Flies touch off debate

by Arlene Surprenant

The issue of flies at the Shawsheen Elementary School in Wilmington was the subject of public discussion for the second time Monday night.

At a previous school committee meeting, the matter was brought up by parents concerned with the large number of flies in the school cafeteria. This they viewed as a health nuisance to students who eat their lunch in the room. Though some parents traced the problem to a dumpster located just outside the cafeteria door, others felt there may be another reason for the flies.

At Monday's board of health meeting, member Milton Calder again raised the issue. Health Director Greg Erickson said he had received no parental complaints, he had been in touch with school officials, and he felt the matter was in the hands of the Public Buildings Department.

Members seemed in agreement the problem was the dumpster's location. They suggested Erickson contact principal Robert Coffill to resolve the issue. If removing the dumpster doesn't work, members said they would have to take stronger measures such as fumigating the entire area.

Extensions granted on Tewksbury condo plans

The Tewksbury Board of Appeals last week put off making decisions on two affordable housing projects until their meeting on October 26.

The 40-day decision period on both projects would have run out on October 20, but the developers allowed the board to wait until the next meeting to decide.

The Gettysburg Common project on Pleasant Street, in which the layout was changed by developer Richard Sughrue, was given one of the two delays. The layout of the project was changed from three multi-family structures to only two, to keep shadows from the third building from falling on the Gale family greenhouse next door.

The number of housing units in the Gettysburg Common proposal stays unchanged at 21, with the new plan showing two multi-family structures of 12 and nine units each, instead of the original plan with one 9-unit and two 6-unit buildings.

The second delay granted by a developer involves the Raymond Street project, at the intersection of Whipple Road and Chandler Street.

Developer Armando DeCarolis agreed by phone to submit a written approval to prolong the decision period on the 55-unit project. As with the Gettysburg Common plan, the decision period on Raymond Street is due to run on October 20, and the developer's agreement lets the appeals board hold off on making the final decision until the October 26 meeting of the board.

Board of Health hits restaurant violations

by Arlene Surprenant

The Wilmington Board of Health is cracking down on violations in area restaurants.

Under a new system, health officials will be more conscientious about making restaurant inspections. Chairman James Ficociello noted Monday night that restaurant owners will be given some leeway in the beginning. But in the near future, he added, if a restaurant can't be cleaned up in 24 hours, it could be closed down.

In light of this, members warned Bob Katsikis of Stelios Restaurant to keep his establishment clean. Though recognizing that much of the problem lies with employees who fail to do routine cleaning jobs, members also noted this has been a repeated violation.

"I have no axe to grind here but we've got to get your attention," said Ficociello. Katsikis, who is hoping for planning board approval for an addition to his kitchen, agreed to try the board's suggestions of either hiring a cleaning service or special needs teenagers to help once or twice a week.

Rucker named manager of Reading Municipal Light

The Reading Municipal Light Department will have a new manager, Leonard Rucker, of Raynham. So the Reading edition of the Times-Chronicle reported last Friday. Rucker was appointed at the Monday (Sept. 28) meeting of the light board, and has accepted.

Rucker has been the power production manager of the Taunton Municipal Light for the last year and a half, overseeing 68 employees. He is to succeed Norbert Rhinerson, who was the Reading Light general manager for 15 years, before his retirement last summer.

Reading is the largest utility of its kind in the Commonwealth. The Taunton Municipal Light Department is the largest generating municipality in New England. It manufactures all its own electricity, while the RMLD purchases electricity from Boston Edison and other sources.

According to the chairman of Reading Light, Allan Moses, Rucker has a contract for $65,000 a year, and he must be given six months notice, if Reading Light decides to terminate the contract.

Rucker has over 17 years in the electric power industry. Prior to his service at Taunton he was a principal consultant to power utilities while employed at Inter/Science Consultants of Braintree.

Before that he was a division head for a construction management group at Boston Edison and a senior associate engineer with Stone and Webster Engineering Corporation.

According to the Reading paper he is well aware of what may be his major undertaking, at Reading Light, that of guiding the department through its dispute with Wilmington.

Rucker is married, and has two children. He will join Reading Light no later than November 2.

PLANTAR WARTS AND LASER SURGERY

Laser Surgery is one of the newest and most significant applications of Laser Technology is the last two decades. Laser Surgery takes advantage of intense heat generating properties to cut and remove tissue while reducing many of the undesirable side effects that sometimes result from using a scalpel.

In our office we now use this Laser Technology in the removal of warts and other skin lesions of the foot. Warts to be removed are identified, anesthetized with local anesthesia and "lased" with short bursts of laser light. Not only is this treatment very effective, but post-operative discomfort and limitations are minimal.

Wilmington police to open firing range

A firing range for police training is nearing completion on Abigail's Island, off Andover Street in North Wilmington.

Officer Lawrence Redding has been developing the range in an old gravel pit which has been used as a dumping area for stumps and logs. The area has been situated to face northeast, with no dwelling within a mile downrange. A gravel embankment 30 feet high has been built, and faced with logs.

Redding envisions the area as more than just a shooting range. One section of the range is designed to be an area for tactical training. An officer would have to hit "bad guy" targets while avoiding other targets representing victims or innocent bystanders. Eventually this area will include a small building made of old railroad ties, to be used for training in approaching and entering a building.

Redding said the range will provide a training area unlike any available to police in the area. Currently police must use Camp Curtis Guild or the Reading police range, which may soon be closed. These areas are usually booked long in advance.

The town hired Deloury Construction Co. of Andover to move gravel to create the embankment, and break up large boulders on the site, as well as to clean up an old gravel pit on the island. D.P.W. Supt. Bob Palmer estimates that the cost of the work at between $2000 and $3000.

The town Department of Public Works is preparing signs to warn the public of the shooting area. Access to the area is naturally restricted by its being surrounded by a large swamp. Only one road leads to the area, and it is controlled by a gate at the D.P.W. garage.

Nonetheless, police are cautioning the public not to venture onto Abigail's Island. They plan to begin using the range next week.

Shooting range Old railroad ties serve as a backstop for this close-range target area. The range is faced so there is no house for more than a mile downrange.

Lead stoppers Like a toothy grin, logs line the backstop of the new Wilmington police shooting range on Abigail's Island.

Variances granted for septic systems

Two requests for variances dealing with septic systems occupied members of the Wilmington Board of Health Monday evening.

In one instance, Joseph and Catherine Murphy received a variance to replace a failed septic system with a second system which technically violates Title V regulations. Health Director Greg Erickson had some concerns because the new, larger system would be too close to the water table. He said the best way to correct the situation would be to use a pump system to raise the bed, something which is considered very costly.

Chairman James Ficociello said though he was concerned with someone buying the home at a later date, he could go along with a variance if the Murphys agreed to go with a pump system should the system fail again. Members also said they could use state regulations instead of their own more stringent ones and allow the Murphys to put six inches of stone under the pipes to give some filtration. The board normally requires 12 inches of stone.

The board set a two week time limit to complete the job.

In a second instance, builder Ralph Newhouse requested a variance to build a septic system for a home on Salem Street around a blue spruce tree valued at $10,000. Regulations require vegetation be removed on a septic site.

Erickson expressed some concern about the environmental impact of removing the tree. When Joe Paglia said he was opposed to the variance because he felt the tree's roots would follow the water and damage the system, Erickson said the roots wouldn't attack the pipes. He added the system would be higher than the roots so there would be no damage.

Ficociello suggested they grant the variance if Newhouse would agree to bear the cost and responsibility of replacing the system should there be any future problems.

SAT tests at Tech Nov. 7

Seniors at Shawsheen Tech interested in pursuing further education should plan to take the SAT (Scholastic Aptitude Test), which will be administered November 7 at local high schools.

Although registration deadline was October 2, students can obtain information and application forms now from their Shawsheen Tech Guidance Counselors for future exams. Taking the SAT is the first step for seniors toward admission to college. Approximately 20 percent of Shawsheen students typically take the SAT.

Additional test dates will be offered, with most district high schools administering the test on December 5 (registration deadline October 30) and January 23 (registration deadline December 18). The Shawsheen Tech Guidance Office also has more information on test center locations and data for 1988.

Frankly speaking

by Kevin John Sowyrda

1987 will most certainly go down in history as the year of the fallen saints. First there were T.V. evangelists Jim and Tammy Faye Baker. Jim was found to have an eye for pretty women, and Tammy an eye for anything with a high price tag on it. Then there was Gary Hart, who challenged the press to scrutinize his "boring" domestic life, only to find that the press and the Bimini Tourist Bureau did not find it any too boring. And finally, we have Mike Dukakis. Last week it was revealed that his campaign manager and best friend, John Sasso, had prepared a video tape for the New York Times showing Delaware Senator Joseph Biden guilty of plagiarism.

The Duke has got to be the greatest saint ever brought down in the history of public personalities, because a lot of people really thought he was a saint. I mean really. Because without a doubt, Dukakis' greatest attribute has always been the fact that in a state known for its scandals, the Duke of St. Michael was always thought to be above it all, and disinterested in the political garbage of the day. In fact, for a man who can't give a speech worth a hill of beans, Dukakis' only political attribute has been that he was generally perceived as honest. But people only perceived that, and those who have campaigned against the Duke would be the first to set you straight.

In the big Dukakis-King rematch, it was none other than Sasso who put together the now famous "sex-tape", poking fun at King and his wife Jodi. The tape was the sleaziest of sleazy political moves, but some how Sasso was able to survive, so that he could continue to run the Dukakis political machine. Today, that same machine finds itself at a screeching halt with the resignations of John Sasso and Paul Tully.

And what is most significant in the long run is how the management of the Dukakis presidential campaign will help resurrect Baystate politicians who were previously thought dead. Ed King is the best example here. Since Dukakis announced his bid for the White House, an inordinate number of people have challenged the Duke on taking credit for the "Massachusetts economic miracle". They have instead attributed it to former governor King, and have received significant publicity in the process. Add to this the reminder that we've all been given as to how Governor and Mrs. King were victimized by the Dukakis campaign years ago, and you could be witnessing the first rebirth of someone who was brought down by the Boston Globe.

Now a registered republican, King doesn't keep that high a profile. But the Dukakis campaign for president may be the best thing that ever happened to him, should he be eyeing a gubernatorial run in 1990.

Last Wednesday evening was surprising because of the small number of people who came out for the public hearing on a possible sludge disposal site in Wilmington. One speaker commented that confusion may have been a factor in the disappointing turnout, as town meeting held the previous night had rezoned the same land for residential development.

But it was a different story on Thursday night when the eleven o'clock news gave coverage of a crowd exceeding one thousand people who turned out to oppose a similar sludge site proposed in Walpole. If the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority (M.W.R.A.) were to compare these two different turnouts, they'd certainly stay clear of Walpole and start considering Wilmington. But appearances can often be deceiving, and though it's hard to judge why so few people were at town hall last Wednesday night, it's safe to say that the opposition is still alive and well.

While local residents were quick to support the rezoning article last week and the arguments of the attorney, questions have arisen. One abutter to the Andover Street land which M.W.R.A. has been eyeing, has questioned how the residential developers, Danco Development, will obtain financing from any bank while a sludge site is hanging over their heads. And legally, Danco would still have the right to sell their land to M.W.R.A.

State Rep. Jim Miceli has been active in the fight against the sludge disposal facility. Miceli has recently filed a bill in the Legislature which freezes rate increases by the M.W.R.A. until they have established their plan for sludge disposal. Commenting on the proposed sludge site in Wilmington, Miceli said, "It's a long shot, and it was from the very beginning; but you have to show strength behind your view. If you don't, you're in trouble!" As a result, residents can still put their feelings in writing, and forward them to the M.W.R.A. in the very near future.

After all, it's better to be safe than sorry, and as Miceli put it, "It aint over till it's over."

The October 11, 1961 edition of the Town Crier of Wilmington noted that:

Employees of the town water, highway and tree departments would go on a 40 hour work week beginning November 1 with the pay remaining the same as for the 44 hour week they had been working.

Police Chief Paul Lynch would see that all stores not exempted by the Common Day of Rest law will be closed Columbus Day. As Lynch explained the law to the selectmen Monday night, only those stores with two employees only including the proprietor may remain open. Some stores could be open for the sale of newspapers only.

Only the chief of police or a designated police officer could grant permits for working on holidays.

A. Daniel Gillis, for seven years a member of the planning board, was sworn in again on Oct. 8 being reappointed by Town Manager Cecil Lancaster.

Danny Cosman of Wilmington Radio and TV was recognized as the man who made it possible for the Chamber of Commerce to raffie a tv set in conjunction with its Christmas Program. Danny acquired the tv for the Chamber at something like "150 percent discount."

October 12 and 13, Reading Motor Mart would sell 1963 15" snow throwers at $82.50 "while they last"

Pictured, wet but smiling, at the high school field taking part in the Booster's Drive were Nancy Maglio, Joanne Baker, Betty Borghetti, Terry Bowen and Tana Fairfield.

Ed Driscoll of Chase Road was appointed a member of the Wilmington Board of Health.

During the week torrential rains caused flooding and a picture showed Flood Plastics (Sweetheart) practically under water. The buildings were in darkness for several days when water reached the transforme.

The Humble Farmer Building character

Every adult knows that suffering is good for kids. It builds character. Had we not suffered when we were kids, we wouldn't be half as good as we are today.

Adults agree that back in the old days it was much cheaper and easier to come in contact with wholesome doses of character-building suffering than it is nowadays. Back before snow blowers, they'll tell you, kids cleared driveways and walks by hand. They mowed lawns with reel mowers instead of perching insolently on those rider things - which cost more than an automobile ought to, they will add - like they do today.

Unfortunately, the need for building character is deep-rooted in our culture and parents still secretly wonder how their kid can be President if he/she isn't exposed to a bit of good old-fashioned suffering. To the adult mind, a rainy vacation weekend at the beach without TV and the telephone simply won't do the job. And then they'll think back to the hot sticky summers when they broke their backs helping grampa put in the hay - still not realizing, of course, that most of the time they were underfoot, making a mess, and in the hired man's way.

Lately, more and more concerned and caring parents have discovered a program of organized suffering created especially for the spoiled, pampered or difficult child. As you have probably already guessed, it is called Outward Bound.

A mother and her 15-year-old son enter the Salt Lake City airport where he is to join a group about to experience two weeks of hiking and rubber rafting in the Snake River Canyon.

At the designated meeting spot there are a dozen or so nervous looking kids sitting around - admiring their new Nike sneakers or pretending to study their printed instructions, trying to avoid making eye contact with one another.

Two cool dudes are off in one corner, puffing away at their last cigarette. A Central American kid, looking totally bewildered, is obviously suffering from culture shock. A couple of other timid souls with big duffle bags are staring at their feet. From time to time they cautiously peep up at one another, but nobody says a word.

In the center of the area two sophisticated rich girls are managing to change their clothes in public - putting shorts under their skirts in a great disrobing routine that would be banned on any stage in Paris.

But only one kid is there with his mother and he is totally mortified. He wants to act like they're not related and whispers, "OK Mom, you better hurry so you don't miss your plane." But her plan doesn't leave for an hour and she wants to sit around and size up the kids with whom he will be sharing hardships in the desert with for the next two weeks.

She finally gives in to his frantic whispers and gives him a goodbye hug while he stands there, stiff as a board, hissing, "Don't embarrass me mother, get out of here."

Two weeks later the kids are all best friends, having suffered together gloriously in 100 degree heat.

For what can bond a crowd of youngsters together quicker than a brisk four-mile run at 5 a.m.? What is better for them than hiking for hours through desert that has recently been burnt over by fires started by lightning?

Nothing must be left behind to litter the natural beauty of the land and that includes human waste. Even the marines never had to carry that on their backs.

Suffering is compounded several days out when it is discovered that a spring which is usually tapped for drinking water has gone dry. Muddy river water is collected. A day later, when the sediment has settled, iodine is added to make it potable. Ever drink Snake River water with iodine in it? Those who have will tell you that it builds the kind of character that this country needs.

The expedition builds so much character that a kid who has recently returned will readily admit that he has enough to last a lifetime and doesn't need to go again. Ever. Which means that parents will certainly continue to tout the program in ever increasing numbers. Ask any of them for the ultimate goal of Outward Bound. Most will sigh as they say, "Get rid of the kids for two weeks."

letter to the editor

Dear Larz:

Obviously Frank Bonfilio (political cartoon, Sept. 23) doesn't work nights or never tried to get a babysitter on a school night.

Unfortunately in Tewksbury politics our one annual town meeting has given birth to a bevy of special town meetings. Special (unless you have no children, do not work and have no commitments) stands for Special Interest groups. In a town as large as Tewksbury it is disgraceful that we don't need a quorum to pass town legislation and to make matters worse we have meetings every few months to hash over things that our well informed town fathers forgot about in May and rehash items that were not passed at the annual. (How do you think condos came to town?)

It is time town meetings were tucked into history books. If we have to have government 'for the people, by the people' - there must be a better way than having just 300 or even 400 voters make decisions for thousands of voters. When major issues come up they should be on the ballot - perhaps setting aside one day a year for a special ballot with all the town meeting questions on it. At least then everyone would have the same chance to get out and vote.

Town meetings are not representative of the majority they are actually discriminatory to many such as the night worker and voters with children.

The people of Tewksbury are not as apathetic as Mr. Bonfilio would like everyone to believe. Since we must feed, clothe, and take care of our families first, town meetings are not a privilege all of us can partake in.

Patricia Winters Meuse

Dear Larz:

This is my final plea to the highway department and the board of selectmen in Tewksbury. The plea is the same as many in the past. My road. It is an approved road. I was instructed by one of the selectmen in town to check this out and I did. It was passed as an approved road many years ago. Now it can no longer even be considered a "road."

This morning as I was walking down the "road," I sprained my ankle. This may keep me laid up costing me valuable time and money as I work a full time job.

My second daughter has purchased a 1987 vehicle and has now bottomed out for the third time on this "road." My husband and I have experienced the same with repair bills to verify this.

My third daughter had been refused rides up the street by her friends and their parents because of the severity of the "road." One of these refused-rides occurred at 11 p.m. To my daughter's distress she had to walk up the "road" by herself at that late hour. We are speaking here of a 15 year old child. This is a frequent happening as adults as well as young adults refuse to drive up the "road."

My fourth oldest has had to carry his hockey equipment down the "road" for the same reason I mentioned in the latter statement.

I have invited the selectmen in the past to please come up and take a ride up the "road." I guess they feel as other people do as they haven't taken me up on my invitation.

I have been told by Mr. Kane that the only way the situation can be remedied is to retar the road, but that I would have to go on a waiting list. I was informed by the Superintendent of the Highway Department that even if I did put myself on the list it would be years before I could get any action.

I have written numerous letters and have made calls to three of the selectmen last year. I was promised some results but as yet none have surfaced.

I invite anyone to please drive up the "road" at a speed higher than 10 miles per hour and I can assure you that you will refuse to do the same again.

I intend to pursue this matter until I have received some assistance.

I am forwarding copies of this letter to the Town Crier, The Lowell Sun, and to all the selectmen in Tewksbury with the hope that someone can give me a direction follow.

An irate Tewksbury resident
Mary Ann Murphy

Down the rabbit hole?

Authorities are searching for a 450-pound pumpkin which escaped from its pumpkin patch in North Wilmington sometime Saturday night. Gardener Hugh Wiberg believes that the escapee had three or four accomplices in a truck. He is offering a reward of $100 for information leading to its return. Persons with information may call the Town Crier, 658-2346.

editorial

What constitutes a threat?

If there is a scare word in suburbia these days, it is "774". The term refers, of course, to Chapter 774, a law which allows builders to apply for a "comprehensive permit" for a housing project.

The idea is that if a builder is willing to set aside at least 25 percent of the units in a project as low-income housing, then he can group many of his permit processes into one application. If the town turns down the application, the developer can appeal to the state Housing Appeals Committee.

The law is otherwise known as the "anti-snob zoning law", since it was designed to block wealthy communities' attempts to exclude low-income housing.

The law was passed in 1969, but lay dormant due to a lack of state funding and a stagnant real estate market. But that has all changed in the past couple of years. A boom economy has created a real estate market where housing prices have quadrupled in the past four or five years.

This boom has created a scenario where developers have latched onto Chapter 774 as a route to greatly increased profits. Why build 40 houses when you can build 400 condos?

Well, it seems that some developers are not content to simply use 774 as a means of providing low-income housing. They seem to think they can also use it as a means of coercion, to secure other developments as well.

One example came in the recent town meeting in Wilmington. A developer had picked up a parcel of about 13 acres in South Wilmington. He went to town meeting last spring, seeking to have it rezoned for industry. The rezoning was turned down.

He then announced that he would seek a comprehensive permit for that property -- he was going with Chapter 774 housing.

A group of neighbors then got together and sought to have their property rezoned for general business, and the developer's 13 acres were included.

In the town meeting, the developer stated that he never made a threat about Chapter 774.

He had never stated his proposal as a threat. But his 774 proposal was already filed. The message was quite clear: if you don't rezone to general business, we'll proceed with 774.

The town meeting did not buy it, and turned down the rezoning.

Now a Tewksbury developer has concocted a similar plan. He has applied for a comprehensive permit, seeking to build 24 units on a parcel of 6.5 acres. Of course, the neighbors were opposed.

At the comprehensive permit hearing on Thursday night in Tewksbury, he announced that if he could build nine houses, he would withdraw the comprehensive permit application.

Tewksbury has one-acre zoning. A strict interpretation of the zoning by-law would allow him to build probably six homes. But if he is allowed to proceed with nine homes, he will drop his 774 action.

Perhaps the best way to handle such a threat is to tell the developer to go ahead with 774. The town should be careful to document the entire course of the proceedings, because there have been indications that the state will frown on attempts to use 774 as a threat. One official has said that if a developer attempts to threaten neighbors with an increased number of units if they oppose a 774 application, then the state will refuse to hear an appeal of the case.

It is quite clear to neighbors of the proposed developments that 774 is being used as a threat. Hopefully when the matter ends up before the state Housing Appeals Committee, it will come across the same way.

Collection of old photos donated

A photo album has been presented to the Friends of the Harnden Tavern, founded by Foster Balser, on a recent trip to Maine. It shows scenes of Middlesex Avenue and of the old high school, which was destroyed recently, and at that time called the Center School.

As an estimate, the date of the picture is about 1900.

One photo, for instance, is from the steeple of the old town hall, when that building still had a steeple, dating from its Baptist Church days. The photo shows the Congregational parsonage, the Nichols Funeral Home, and St. Thomas Church (the old one) all in a row.

There are several photos of the Congregational Church, showing the old carriage shed, and others showing the elm trees which used to be in front. Those trees, four in number were planted on July 4, 1876, by the Farmers & Mechanics Club of Wilmington.

There are photos of students in the old, old high school, with 15 or more persons in each photo. Unfortunately, in every case but one there are no names.

In that one case everyone is wearing a head covering, such as might be used at Halloween. The names, or some of them, are familiar, but the faces are not to be seen.

The best picture is of Carolyn Swain, for many years a school teacher in Wilmington. The Swain School, former high school, is named for her and her sister Henrietta.

Carolyn, in this 1901 photo, is called "Carrie," and is to be described as an attractive young lady.

Accreditation team visits local schools

by Arlene Surprenant

A 19 member team of professionals has been visiting Wilmington's three elementary schools this week as part of the ongoing accreditation process. If the team is favorably impressed, Wilmington's elementary schools could be the first in Massachusetts to receive their accreditation from the New England Association of Schools and Colleges.

Approximately 130 faculty members, administrators, parents, and invited guests attended a banquet at the Sons of Italy Hall Sunday night to welcome the team.

Under the guidance of overall chairman Suzanne McGee, the team has spent the past three days reviewing the schools in nine special areas. The nine standards by which schools are measured include staff and administration, community support, building maintenance, pupil performance, and atmosphere.

In order to see if the schools are living up to the philosophy and objectives outlined by the screening committees, team members paid visits to classrooms, interviewed all staff personnel, and talked with a cross section of parents. They gave a brief summation of their findings and feelings before faculty members Wednesday afternoon.

According to Assistant Superintendent Henry Dembowski, school officials expect to receive a written report from the team in two weeks. The report will contain areas of commendation as well as areas needing improvement. Dembowski said he is planning several follow-up sessions and any recommended changes could be implemented as early as next September.

Dembowski said his primary feeling now is one of "great relief" that officials have met their deadline and accomplished so much with the help of so many. He added he is especially grateful to Martha Mahoney, overall chairman of the Wilmington screening committees, and Nancy Stouffer, who supervised the banquet and team room arrangements, as well as other professionals who gave so much of their time to this endeavor.

Irene Chisholm played piano at theater

by Capt. Larz Neilson

The recent Town Crier story of the Wilmington Grange told of the Saturday afternoon movies which were presented there during the 1920s, and of Mrs. Chase, who was the piano player. It did not tell of the piano playing of Irene McMahon, later Irene Chisholm, at the Grange. That occurred at a later date.

There were telephone calls, to tell the writer that he had forgotten. He had not. He just never was in the Grange Hall when Irene was the piano player. The people who called were of a younger age than the writer.

Irene was an excellent piano player. She also played the piano in Wilmington High School for school assemblies.

Memory, of course, plays a big part in the stories which are presented. For convenience memory can be divided into three parts.

1. What the writer remembers.
2. What other people remember, after the writer has presented his story.
3. The writer forgets what the third part is.

Cunningham, McDermott named assistants at Tech

The School Committee for Shawsheen Tech has announced the appointment of two assistant superintendent-directors.

Robert E. Cunningham of Georgetown, Special Education Coordinator at Shawsheen Tech
since 1984, was named Assistant Superintendent-Director. He served as interim Superintendent-Director from August 1986 to February 1987, when Charles Lyons was named to the Superintendent-Director post. Cunningham taught in the Special Needs Department at Minuteman Tech from 1977 to 1984 and coordinated in-service training programs there. He has also worked as a research assistant at Boston University and a machinist.

Cunningham is a graduate of Salem State College, with a B.S. degree in Business Education, and Boston University, where he earned a Master's of Education in Career Education and Special Education.

John F. McDermott of Tewks-bury, Area Coordinator for Occupational Education since 1977, was named Assistant Superintendent-
Director for Community Services.
From 1965 to 1977 he served as an industrial arts teacher in the

Wilmington Public Schools. He has also worked as an industrial engineer. McDermott holds a B.S. in Industrial Engineering from Northeastern University and a masters of Education in Secondary School Administration and Supervision from Salem State College.

"I feel very positive, very excited about this opportunity," Cunningham said. "This is an excellent vocational-technical school, with our students and staff as our biggest assets."

Cunningham said his primary goal will be "to assist the other administrators and staff in their pursuit of our educational objectives." To do that, Cunningham will facilitate open communications among staff members, especially administrators, and hold regular meetings with individual administrators to supplement the superintendent-director's sessions with the full administrative staff. A major role will be to oversee the daily operation of the school in the absence of the superintendent-director, dealing with "our day-to-day problems and successes," Cunningham noted. He will also meet with several administrators when duties overlap, and work with them to re-establish and redefine responsibilities where needed.

"I want to continue to foster and promote the excellent attitude among our teaching staff, foster creativity and channel it positively," the new assistant SD said. "This school has generated a reputation among employers in the area for producing quality,
competent young men and women.
We approach being the best in the state - we're right up there."

McDermott cites new programs

McDermott expressed satisfaction with his new role. "I look at the position as a new, exciting opportunity because of the changes occurring within today's schools, with declining enrollments for example," he said. "We will need to develop creative approaches to utilizing our staff and our resources. We have the opportunity to develop a new and innovative programs such as postsecondary training and retraining, primarily for area companies experiencing changes in technology and layoffs."

The new assistant SD noted how his role "can increase the opportunities to interface with industry because they are experiencing changes in the work force. There are fewer people available and many do not have the skills they are looking for - we can be the catalyst to train people."

McDermott said his role would also include development of special programs, such as the Gifted and Talented SPACE (Shawsheen
Program for Advanced Career
Exploration); the Bay State Skills Training Program, a cooperative effort with Alpha Industries,
Altron and Dynamic Research Corporation; and enhancing the skills of faculty members through in-service training.

"Public Relations is also another key area," McDermott said. "We want to make the public aware of facilities available to them at Shawsheen Tech." McDermott will also coordinate the evening and summer school programs and focus on specialty courses for adults.

Both appointments became effective October 1.

Kidsplace

The Kidsplace design by architect Robert Leathers is now on display in the children's section of the Wilmington Memorial Library. All residents are encouraged to view the layout of this unique play area in the next few weeks.

Also on display are books on creative playgrounds and playground designs created by elementary students in Wilmington. Many of the designs were utilized in the final design by Leathers.

Shawsheen School

A harvest pie auction will entice residents to the Shawsheen School Friday, October 30 at 7 p.m. The school PAC is hosting this fun filled event in the cafeteria.

All parents and children are invited to come and bid on their favorite pie. During the evening, refreshments of cider and donuts will be served. Rumor has it that Principal Bob Coffill may be in for quite a surprise—maybe a pie in the face?

Profits will go toward educational programs for Shawsheen Students.

Wildwood School

The Wildwood School will be starting a new program designed to promote the development of self-esteem and positive thinking in our students. Each month a Student of the Month will be selected based on work habits, academics, behavior, and citizenship. The students will be chosen by the classroom teachers. They will receive a certificate and have their names and photos displayed in the school.

Cynthia Jones, PAC treasurer, revealed her artistic talents this month with a perky October bulletin board. Wrapped in Halloween colors, the PAC scarecrow welcomes visitors to the school and provides information about upcoming events. Cynthia will create other displays using a different theme each month.

Mr. Malcom Jones joins the Wildwood staff as part-time guidance counselor. While he is new to our school, Mr. Jones has held this position in the Wilmington system since 1973. Prior to that time, he was a math teacher at Wilmington High. Mr. Jones plans group sessions to develop social interaction and enhance self-esteem. He will serve in an advisory capacity to parents and will identify and service students with special needs. We welcome Mr. Jones and look forward to sharing in the enthusiasm and professional growth of the Wildwood staff.

Storyteller Betty Lehrman will present "Tales for the Telling" to all students in two sessions on Thursday, October 15. Through mime, music, and participation, Betty involves her audiences in the tales and traditions of other places and times. Ellen Heigham was instrumental in bringing Betty to our school.

Parents are invited to attend the school's first PAC meeting on October 15 at 7 p.m. in the All-Purpose room. We will "officially" introduce Principal Michael Tikonoff as well as several of our new staff personnel.

Maureen McDonald will host the evening. "Catch the Wildwood Spirit" buttons will be on sale, for those who haven't purchased one yet, and light refreshments will be served.

NOTE: This column is for the benefit of all schools which enroll Wilmington students. We are interested in hearing from you, whether your news be about students, faculty members, interesting happenings, upcoming events, or just fun type tidbits of information. Submit your news to the Town Crier office care of Arlene Surprenant by Monday evenings or call Arlene at 658-5696.

Wilmington planners review industrial lots

The Wilmington Planning Board Tuesday night reviewed a site plan of two lots in Technology Park off Ballardvale Street. The plan was presented by Bernie Paquin of Dana Perkins.

Along with the plan, proponents included a letter from DEQE and a Certificate of Compliance from the Conservation Commission. The board also went over bonding for the lots, which was increased from $22,000 to $47,700.

The board must now file a report with the engineering department, which will make a final determination on the plan. In the report, planners will recommend that any minor problems be worked out between Dana Perkins and Fay, Spofford, and Thorndike, the town's consulting engineers.

In other business, the board reviewed conditions placed on a preliminary plan for the Chestnut Estates II subdivision and unanimously agreed to accept the definitive plan submitted by engineer Ken Miller.

Some of the conditions set previously by the board were a change of name for Rooney Circle, the layout of gas lines and the Middlesex Canal on the plan, and markings for curb cuts for wheelchair access.

Miller said he was in the process of filing a notice of intent with the Conservation Commission because of wetlands on site.

Tewksbury School News

Junior High open house

The staff and administration of Tewksbury Junior High School, including IGE staff, have invited all parents and interested citizens to the 25th annual "Back to School" night on Thursday, Oct. 8 at seven o'clock.

Over the years, this has proven to be a means of recalling those "early teen" years of junior high school for parents in attendance. Through it, parents can judge the changes made in curricula and school offerings.

The evening's program begins at 7 p.m. in the auditorium with a welcome and announcements by the principal. Following that, the program will feature seven periods of 15 minutes duration according to Thursday's schedule. The program will conclude by 9:00.

This is an excellent opportunity to show an interest in your child's school work. Each staff member will give you a clear idea of goals and expectations for each class, will review homework guidelines and will outline grading practices. In addition, if time permits, there will be an opportunity to discuss your child's progress.

Usually, this open house draws a large crowd of parents. Please mark your calendar now - Thursday, Oct. 8 from 7 to 9 p.m.

"Water Awareness" meeting by LWV

In celebration of Coastweek 87, the League of Women Voters of Wilmington will sponsor an informational meeting on the Ipswich River, to be held Tuesday, October 13 at 8 p.m. at Wilmington Memorial Library.

The meeting, which is open to the public, will feature slides of the Ipswich River from its headwaters in Wilmington to the ocean in Ipswich. The slides will be narrated by Alan MacMillan of the Ipswich River Watershed Association.

Endorsed by more than 250 organizations, Coastweek 87 is a theme around which various groups, agencies and individuals work to foster public awareness of the value of our nation's waterways. The Ipswich River is a significant source of water for nearly 400,000 people within its watershed basin boundaries and in nearby communities which pump water from the river. It is also an important recreational resource for people from all over the north shore.

Protection of this critical natural resource requires the cooperation of all the communities within the basin and other users of the river.

Those who are interested in learning more about the river and its many uses are encouraged to attend this informational meeting.

Flu, pneumonia clinic

The board of health will hold its annual flu and pneumonia clinic at the Town Hall, Glen Road, Sunday, Oct. 18 from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. All senior citizens, especially those over 65 with health problems such as heart disease, high blood pressure, asthma, lung disease, diabetes or kidney disease should get immunized against the flu. If you have not been immunized against pneumonia before, you should consider it this year. The pneumonia immunization vaccine will cost $5.00. The flu shot is free.

Remember if you have had the pneumonia vaccine before it is not necessary to have it again. Any senior allergic to eggs or egg products, should not take the vaccine.

Crafts fair Nov. 29

The seniors' arts and crafts fair will be held in the Buzzell Senior Center Sat., Nov. 28 and Sun., Nov. 29. Many beautiful articles are coming in to the Center, but many more will be needed if the fair is to be as successful as last year's. Don't forget the mittens, last year and the year before a table was set up for mittens only. It was covered with all types, sizes and colors. By the end of the fair all mittens were sold. All types of crafts are needed, so whatever your talent is, we know you will be making some articles.

We all know how important the fair is to all of us. When you finish your articles, take them to the Center. Frances Calandrello will be putting them in one of the many closets in the crafts room. If you can give a price as to what it would sell for, it would be a great help in pricing all the articles.

Dance class

The dance class got off to a good start last Thursday afternoon. We had a good number of seniors being led through many dances by guest instructors. If you wish to get involved in activities at the Center, the dance class may be just the program to start. Why not try it next Thursday. The class starts at 1 p.m. and lasts the afternoon. Our dance floor has been refinished by the maintenance department. What else could you want?

Enjoyable lunches

Seniors attending the meal program at the high school are really enjoying the lunches. This is attributed to the opportunity to select a meal from any of the three types made available. Any Wilmington senior can make a reservation for a meal by calling the center the day before.

Report it to attorney general

It has been brought to our attention that seniors are being solicited by charities for donations. The attorney general's office charged with the responsibility to protect the public in charitable affairs has told us, the law requires all charities before engaging in business, to register and file a detailed financial disclosure statement with their office. Any high pressure tactics, intimidation, threats or repeated harassing calls, should be reported to the office at 727-2235.

Before making a donation it is most important to ask questions. Do not give unless you are satisfied with the answers. If the solicitor gets disturbed because you ask questions, you can believe it may not be a legal charity.

Questions that should be asked include - the name, address and purpose of the charity; what portion of your dollar will actually go to the charity, as opposed to expenses; what is the purpose of the charitable program and how is it carried out. Ask if the solicitor is a volunteer or a paid person. Don't fall for a sad story. These people are usually deceptive operators. A legitimate charity will not use this practice. Never give money requested by a solicitor through a telephone call.

Never make a check out to the solicitor. Always give a donation by check made out to the charity. If you have to give cash, ask for a receipt which bears the name, address and telephone number of the charity. Remember, always ask to see identification from both the solicitor and the charity.

Peters' paintings on exhibit

"Wilmington Now and Then" is the theme of the new exhibit at the Arlington Trust Bank at Wilmington Plaza through Nov. 23, 1987. The oil paintings of local artist, Andrea Peters depict local scenes in Wilmington that touch on the beauty in the town that is so quickly disappearing.

A number of the quiet peaceful areas which Peters painted no longer exist. The brilliant forsythia bushes that bloomed around the old Webber House on Main St. (Rte. 38) have been buried in asphalt to house a new retail development. The old bog which is a favorite spot of Peters and the subject of her award-winning painting "Subtle Beauty in the Bog" is now scheduled for a housing development. Here nature has been left undisturbed to grow and bloom for years, adorning Shawsheen Avenue

(Rte. 129) with a colorful splendor each summer.

There is a small painting of the Buck House on Woburn Street, before the property was sold and the barn torn down and new housing built. The exhibit also includes scenes on Concord Street, and Middlesex Avenue. The old cemetery and apple trees next to the Congregational Church are on view too.

Peters' paintings are represented by numerous galleries across the country. Last month, she received an award at the Pastel Society of America Exhibit at the National Arts Club in New York City. An exhibit of new works by the artist is scheduled at the Enchanted Eye Gallery in Hollis, N.H. in late November. Locally, Peters' paintings can be seen at the Depot Square Artists Gallery on Massachusetts Avenue in Lexington.

Wednesday or Tuesday/Thursday class.

Both men and women are urged to sign up for woodworking. Students will receive instruction in the use of power tools and engage in projects that include gluing and finishing.

Late registrations for adult ed

Late registrations - with no late registration fee - are being accepted now for courses offered by the Adult Education Program at Shawsheen Valley Technical High School.

Openings are available in a variety of programs that enable adults to learn a vocation or explore an avocation, and include: typing, autobody repair, word processing, welding, jazz aerobics, home computers, woodworking, basic plumbing, and basic electrical. There may be limited openings in some of the other 50 courses being offered this fall. Those interested can register by coming to Shawsheen Tech between 6:30 and 9:30 p.m.

Classes began the week of October 5, with some exceptions. Courses typically meet twice a week (Monday/Wednesday or Tuesday/Thursday) from 7 to 10 p.m. and cost from $40 to $125, with most around $80.

Always popular, word processing will be offered in three sessions. Session A runs from October 5 to November 4; session B takes place October 6 to November 5; session C is scheduled for November 10 to December 10. Those registering for word processing must be able to type 45 WPM. Advanced word processing will be offered from November 9 to December 9.

New in 1987 is pre-college chemistry, a 90-hour course that meets college admissions requirements for high school laboratory science. The class takes advantage of Shawsheen's excellent chemical laboratory, with approximately one-half the time spent in the lab, half in lecture and discussion sessions.

Introduction to home computers, which gives attendees of a choice of an October 5 to November 4 session or a November 9 to December 9 session, explains how computers work, how they are used and examples of home and office applications. Students will use Radio Shack TRS-80 computers.

Those looking for an active course can opt for a session of jazz aerobics, which will meet from 7-8:30 p.m. in a Monday/

Dr. Golub speaks at AIM re-opening

by Arlene Surprenant
How to cope with depression and reach out to those with disabilities was the main subject under discussion as AIM Headquarters (handicapped center) celebrated its reopening Tuesday morning.

Dr. Carol Golub of Wilmington Family Counseling was the guest speaker. Her topic, "Is Your Cup Half Empty or Half Full?" touched on getting caught in the "depression trap," how to ward off depression, and ways to cope.

The whole issue of depression, said Dr. Golub, has to do with perception and how people look at the things that happen in their life. Sometimes a negative view takes over and crowds out the good things people can do with their lives.

Dr. Golub warned against getting caught in the "depression trap." She said some disabled people struggle with anger because they're not the superhuman, Helen Keller type. This leads to a poor self-image and feelings of depression, she said.

Other handicapped individuals, she added, deny what's happened to them. This denial prevents them from reaching their full potential and adjusting to their own bodies and limitations.

It was brought out that people can deal with problems by exercising control. The handicapped, especially, can gain control over what they think and the kind of choices they make, Dr. Golub said. For instance, one choice could be to come to the handicapped center and avoid feelings of isolation. At some point, she explained, the disabled have to come to grips with their disability.

Other ways to cope with problems and depression, Dr. Golub added, is to be a volunteer and help others, build a support network of friends who care, and take medication which could help ward off depressed feelings.

Dr. Golub addressed a small but attentive group of handicapped residents and volunteers. The congenial audience held a give and take session following the talk. They enjoyed lunch and homemade refreshments and played card games during the remaining time the center was open.

AIM Headquarters is located in the Fourth of July building and will be open every Tuesday from 10:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. Transportation is furnished through The Ride.

Next Tuesday's program will be a round table discussion on living with daily problems. It will cover transportation for the handicapped, medical bills, clothes specially made for the disabled, and special appliances. John Brown and Judy DiPalma will lead the session. Handicapped residents are encouraged to use the accessible center as a place to relax and socialize with friends old and new. Anyone planning to stay the full three hours is asked to bring his own bag lunch.

Environmental hearing on condos Oct. 14

A Massachusetts Environmental Protection Agency (MEPA) hearing on Middlesex Canal Condominiums proposed for the former App property on Main Street will be held at the town hall auditorium Wednesday, October 14 at 2:30 p.m. Developer Jay Tighe is seeking a comprehensive permit under Chapter 774 for the 168-unit project.

The purpose of the hearing is to determine the need for an Environmental Impact Report for the development. Written comments on the proposal will be accepted up to October 14.

Address comments to the Secretary of Environmental Affairs, MEPA Unit, 100 Cambridge Street, 20th Floor, Boston, MA. 02202.

A decision is expected to be rendered by October 26.

Dr. Golub speaks

"If you got up today and came down here, you made a good decision," said psychologist Dr. Carol Golub to a gathering at the AIM drop-in center in the Fourth of July Headquarters on Tuesday. Dr. Golub is the director of the Wilmington Family Counseling Service.

Ground breaking

Formal groundbreaking for the new Holiday Inn luxury hotel off Andover Street (Route 133) was held last week. Tossing the first shovelful are (left to right) Peter Hayes of the Codman Company; Bo Strom and Brendan Donovan of Charles River Development Corp.; Larry Cahill of Larkin, Inc., of Cedar Rapids Iowa; Thomas A. Walsh of the Codman Company; and Michael Harrity of Copley Real Estate Advisors.

Groundbreaking held for Tewksbury hotel

Charles River Development Group, Inc. and Larkin, Inc. held a groundbreaking ceremony last week to commence construction of a new luxury Holiday Inn in Highwood Office & Research Park, Tewksbury.

The hotel will be developed by Charles River Development Group, Inc. and managed by Larkin, Inc. It will be owned by Tewksbury Hotel Associates, a joint venture between the two firms.

Larkin, Inc. of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, owns 65 luxury hotels nationwide and is the largest Holiday Inn franchise owner in the United States.

Charles River Development Group, Inc. of Boston and Chicago is locally developing Adams Place, a two building office complex on the Quincy/Braintree line.

Tewksbury Hotel Associates purchased the site of 4.4 acres, in the northeast quadrant of the Park, bounded by the Route 495 exit ramp to the south. Peter Hayes of The Codman Company, Inc. represented Charles River Development and Larkin, Inc. Brian Hines, vice president of the Codman represented the owners, 133 Associates and Copley Real Estate Advisors, in the sale transaction.

The Holiday Inn will be situated at a four way interchange along Route 495. The five story facility will include 238 oversize rooms, a complete restaurant and lounge, and meeting and conference facilities for the sophisticated corporate customer. Additionally, a complete health club with an indoor swimming pool, exercise equipment, sauna, steam bath and whirlpool will complement both the hotel and Highwood Office & Research Park.

According to Brendan R. Donovan, Principal of Charles River Development Group, Inc., "The hotel is ideally situated in the heart of the northeast suburban research & development corridor. Within a three mile radius of the hotel is located 10,000,000 square feet where such blue chip companies as Wang, Digital, Honeywell Bull and General Electric operate."

Additionally, Raytheon is building a $50 million facility for their Missile System Division employing 3,000 personnel at nearby Apple Hill Technology Park on North Street, Tewksbury.

"We are very pleased to have an upscale Holiday Inn amidst our park setting. This addition is certainly in keeping with Highwood's overall concept and translates into numerous amenities for tenants and visitors to the Highwood office and Research Park," added Edward Haddad of Highwood Associates.

"The Andover/Tewksbury market has fast become a hub for high tech companies seeking the convenience of a Boston location without the associated costs and hassles. Quality hotel facilities that are convenient to these major users are vital to sustain continued area growth, yet are increasingly difficult to find. Highwood Office and Research Park is an exceptional location that Holiday Inns, Inc. feels will become a premier address along the I-495 corridor," concluded Thomas P. Foley, Director of Franchise Development for Holiday Inn's Eastern Region.

Two Highwood Drive, an 85,400 square foot office/R&D building on two levels is completed and today Highwood Associates announced its first tenant, The Hanover Insurance Company, a property and casualty insurance subsidiary of State Mutual Life Assurance of America.

The Highwood Office and Research Park is a joint venture of 133 Associates and Copley Real Estate Advisors, an affiliate of New England Mutual Life Insurance Company.

Wildcats' offense untracked

Saturday morning was Parents' Day for the Wilmington field hockey team. The parents were treated to coffee, donuts and a 0-0 tie vs perennial rival Chelmsford.

The game was played from endline to endline, with both goalies blanking the attackers. Sophomore goalie Gina Martiniello made 18 saves, while Chelmsford's DeRaney made 14 saves.

Tewksbury

Monday the Wildcats travelled to Tewksbury. The prime concern for Wilmington was to try to score. They had been shutout in their last two attempts.

Seven minutes into the game, junior Laurie Robinson scored the first of her three goals on the day. Tewksbury followed with a goal of its' own by Jessica Miller, assisted by Lisa O'Neill. The half ended 1-1.

Robinson scored her second and third goals within 10 minutes. At the 23 minute mark, junior wing Jen DelNinno scored a beauty from a great lead pass from co-captain Amy Hamilton. Amy finished the afternoon with a penalty stroke goal with five minutes left.

Senior co-captain Jen Ryan registered two assists, with sophomore Ann Marie Andersen getting two assists of her own.

Exceptional play defensively was contributed by Ann Marie Andersen and junior Jill Martyn. Both are trying to fill the void left by injured standout Amy Lavina.

Wilmington 2-Haverhill 1

The strong attack of sophomore Jennifer DelNinno, and outstanding defensive efforts of Amy Hamilton, Lori Cormier, Amy Caruso, and Sue Killelea allowed the Wildcats to edge Haverhill, 2-1.

The scoreless first half showed excellent midfield play, many offensive opportunities, and one big save by sophomore goalie Gina Martiniello.

Scoring started early in the second half when junior wing Jennifer DelNinno scored an unassisted goal. Less than one minute later, DelNinno brought the ball down dodging several "Hillies," drove across the goal mouth to Sue McFayden, who tipped it back for the Laurie Robinson goal.

Late in the game, Haverhill scored off a corner when the ball tipped off a defenseman's stick. Gina Martiniello ended the game with 10 saves.

Wilmington 4-Andover 1

Wilmington hosted Andover and won 4-1. Senior Amy Lavina started the scoring with an unassisted goal. Laurie Robinson ended the scoring in the first half with an assist credited to Ann Marie Andersen.

The second half started with Amy Lavina scoring from a Jen DelNinno pass. Junior Jen DelNinno ended the scoring when she took an Amy Caruso pass and stick handled by several defenders and finally maneuvered around the Andover goalie for the score.

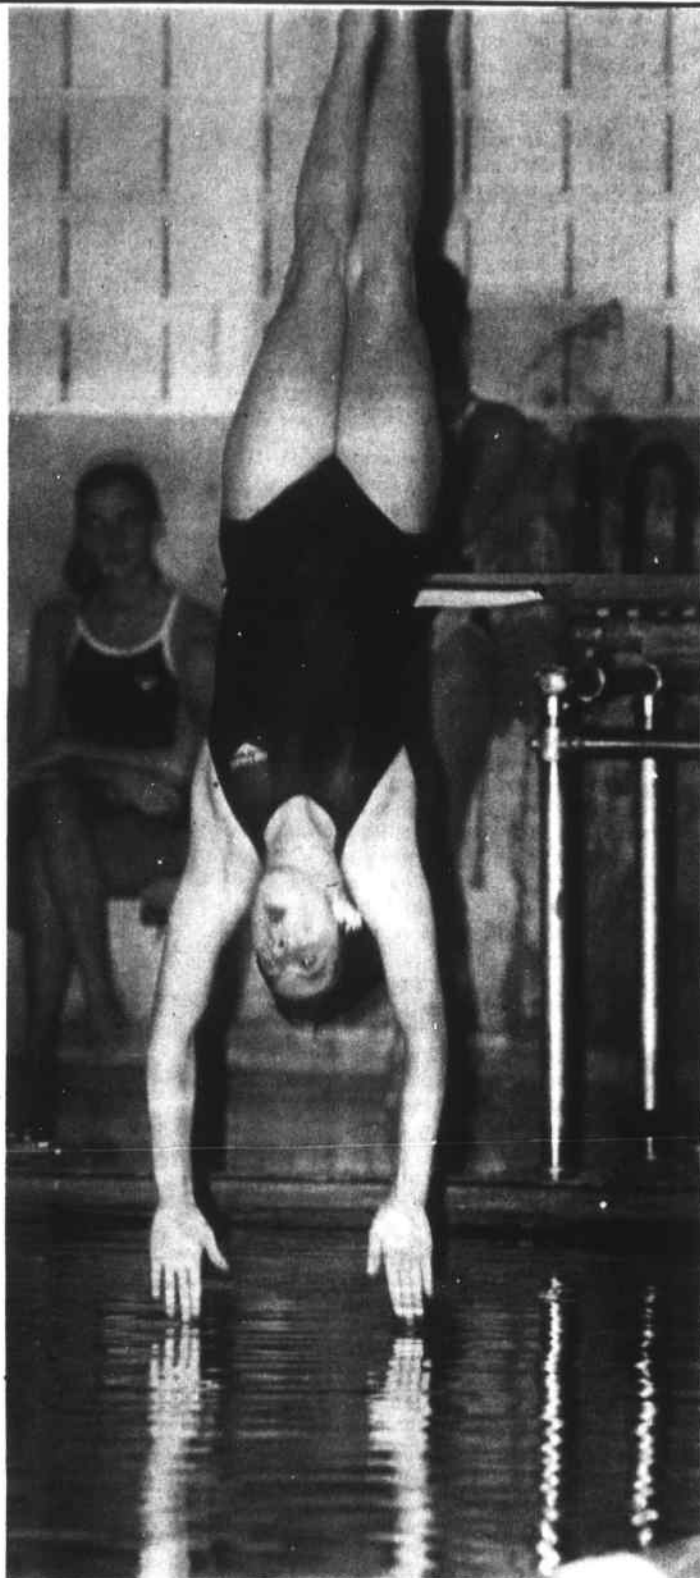

Gina Martiniello ward off nine shots while sophomore Ann Marie Andersen and Amy Lavina were especially sharp on defense.

Methuen 3-Wilmington 0

The Wildcats met their first defeat at Methuen Monday, 3-0. Methuen's Michelle Bourassa scored the winning goal midway through the first half.

Wilmington came out slow and sluggish but got its game together following the Rangers' goal. Many of Jen DelNinno's centering passes were missed while Amy Lavina's corner blasts just went wide.

Wilmington managed to hit goalie pads 14 times but none were tacked home. Gina Martiniello registered 13 saves. Late in the game, Amy Lavina suffered an injury which will keep her out of the lineup for sometime

MVC cross country

Redmen upset Wildcats

For the first time in many years the Tewksbury High School boys cross-country team pulled off a victory over the Wilmington Wildcats. The meet was a real squeaker, and it wasn't decided until the fifth man from each team had crossed the finish line. When the scores were tallied, Tewksbury had a 27 to 28 edge.

Jeff Rideout led all runners with a fine 14:20 effort over the 2.57 Wilmington course. As a sophomore running only his second cross country race ever, Jeff is only beginning to tap his enormous potential.

Wilmington's Paul Maiella ran a good race to take second place, and that set the stage for tough head-to-head competition all the way down the line. Tewksbury's Ben Nichols, greatly improved since last year, grabbed an important third place. Then Wilmington runners Paul DeFronzo and John Carter got fourth and fifth. Tim Martin slipped in for sixth for Tewksbury, followed by Steve Spinelli of Wilmington and Jeff Parsons of Tewksbury.

At that point everything hinged on who would take the ninth place. Fortunately for Tewksbury, its man on the spot was Tom Hooper, an athlete who trains hard and competes with all his heart. Hooper had to hold off a challenge by Chris Flores, but he held on and nailed down the TMHS victory as he crossed the line.

In addition to breaking a long losing streak to Wilmington, the Tewksbury boys' victory placed them in a tie for first place in the Merrimack Valley small school division. It was a pleasant comeback after the opening meet loss to Billerica last week, and it showed the kind of stuff this year's Tewksbury team is made of.

Meanwhile, the girls cross-country team was continuing its winning ways with a solid 23 to 38 trouncing of the Wildcats. Wilmington's Kristen Palm won the race with a strong effort, and the Wildcats' Winnie Corsaro took fourth, but everyone else in the top 10 was from Tewksbury. Team captain Krissie Connor took second, followed by Jennifer Harmon in third.

Following Winnie Corsaro, places five through 10 were taken by Paula Torode, Joanne McNamara, Rachel Smith, Chrissy Juskiewicz, Chrissy Frotten, and Kristen Phillips. It is this kind of team depth that the Tewksbury girls hope will carry them to many victories in the Merrimack Valley Conference this season.

Redmen topple Wildcats, 6-2

One week ago, the Tewksbury Boys' Varsity Soccer Team had trouble finding the net. This past week, the Redmen offense came alive with 11 goals in two games, as Tewksbury defeated Wilmington, 6-2 and Haverhill, 5-0.

The Tewksbury junior varsity continued to impress, as they defeated Wilmington, 3-1, tied a strong Andover squad, 1-1, and romped over Haverhill, 8-0.

The Tewksbury freshmen moved their record to 2-0-0 with a 4-0 victory over a good Wakefield team.

Tewksbury 6-Wilmington 2
The Redmen travelled to Wilmington and for the second game in a row played extremely well as a team. Five different players scored six goals, with senior tri-capt Jeff Stone scoring two goals and assisting on one.

Senior forward Bob Adrian started the scoring after converting on a corner kick from Jeff Stone. This goal coming at the 13 minute mark of the first 40 minute half was followed six minutes later by Stone's first goal off a Keith Krugh pass.

Junior stopperback Keith Krugh assisted again on a feed pass to senior tri-capt Tim Quinn at the four minute mark of the second half to up the Redmen lead to 3-0. After Wilmington's ace scorer Paul Burke made the score 3-1 at the eight minute mark, Stone made the score 4-1 as he converted a rebound shot off the Wilmington goalie at the 20 minute mark.

Wilmington answered that goal with one of its own off a Tewksbury defender three minutes later. Senior winger Derek Doherty took an easy push pass from senior forward Ron Perrin along the endline and deposited a shot on the near post side to up the count to 5-2. Junior Tom Walsh closed out the scoring at the 36 minute mark beating the goalie on a breakaway after receiving a long pass from sophomore back Brian Wahl. Junior backs Derek Heartquist and Pat McCaffery played well for the Redmen as did Keith Krugh in guiding the Redmen defense.

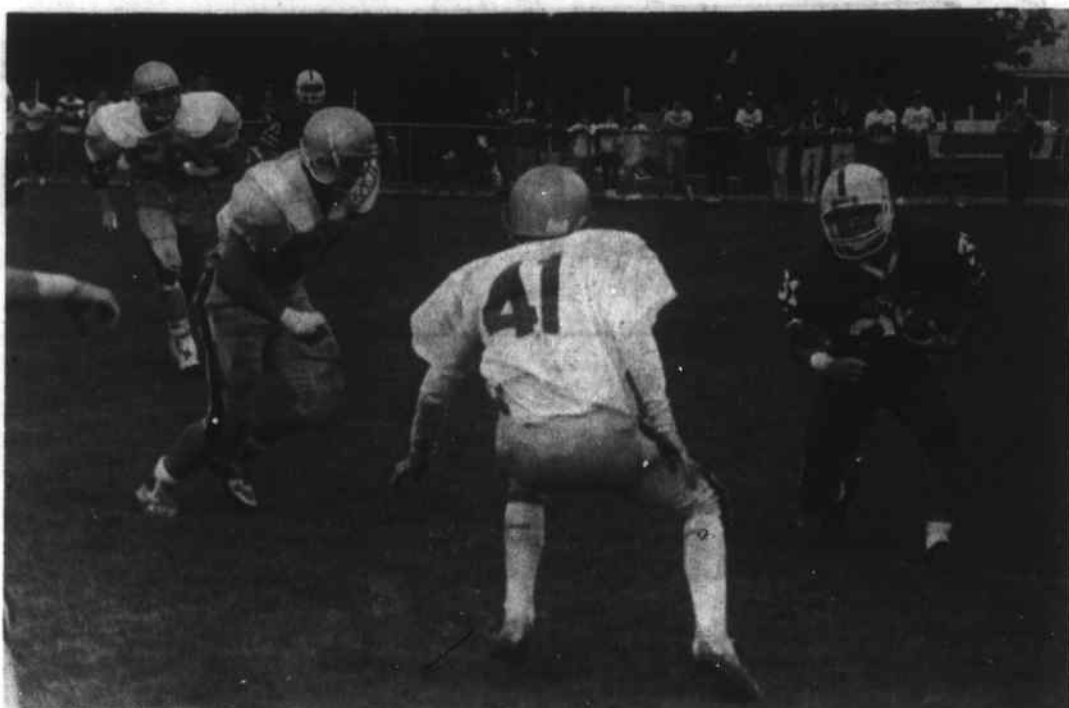

The Tewksbury junior varsity came back from a 1-0 halftime deficit to beat their Wilmington counterparts 3-1. The jvs were led by sophomore midfielder Pat Romano with two goals. Gary Kidder, a sophomore, added the third goal, assisting on one goal, as did forward Greg Basillio.

Tewksbury 5-Haverhill 0
Haverhill came to Tewksbury for a Saturday morning game. The Hillies spent most of the game trying to keep the Redmen away from their net, as Tewksbury dominated from start to finish. Haverhill had only one good shot on net, that in the second half, a shot saved in exciting fashion by backup goalkeeper, junior Chris Stys.

Senior tri-captain Dan Fiore was the goalkeeper of record in this 5-0 Redmen win. Jeff Stone converted a Ron Perrin corner kick 12 minutes into the game to provide the winning goal. Two minutes before the end of the half, Tim Quinn converted a penalty shot to give the Redmen a 2-0 halftime lead. Five minutes into the half, Quinn struck again off a 25 yard shot from the right, off a pass from senior midfielder Joe Seely. Derek Doherty then added his third and fourth goal of the season, both assisted by Tommy Walsh.

The first goal came off a 20 yard shot from the left of the net, and the last shot from five yards out. Another good team victory, as there was no one outstanding individual for the Redmen.

The Tewksbury junior varsity had eight different players score in their 8-0 victory over the Hillies. Chris Sands, Pat Romano, Brian Cooper, Jamie Holden, Dave Karlberg, Dave Conti, Greg Basillio, and Gary Kidder, all sophomores, each scored. Romano and Karlberg, had one assist each, while Kidder had two assists.

TMHS shutout again

Tewksbury's Tom Burns gets set to cut upfield in Saturday's 7-0 loss to Lowell High School. The Redmen were shutout for the second time this season and look to rebound in two weeks against Chelmsford.

Tough loss

Pat Nally (34) and John Rago (53) escort Don Sullivan (44) for a good gain at Methuen Saturday. The Wildcats lost, 16-8 in another improved performance.

It's YOUR Money

KEEP CAREFUL RECORDS ON LOANS

Interests costs used to be deductible for all kinds of borrowing, but under the new tax law, all loans are not the same. Business - loan interest is totally deductible, and interest on loans for investment purposes is (up to the amount of investment income), but consumer borrowing, after a five-year phaseout, won't be deductible at all. And it will be up to the borrower to prove how a loan is used.

For instance, if you borrow against a margin account at your brokers, ostensibly for investment purposes, and put the proceeds in your regular checking account, you must invest within 15 days. Otherwise, the Internal Revenue Service will hold that the loan proceeds went toward ordinary expenses you paid from the account. Business loans are even tougher, because there is no 15-day allowance; the IRS assumes the loan goes to pay the first expenses thereafter.

Two recommendations: keep good records and, better yet, keep separate accounts for personal, business and investment purposes. You can depend on the tax know how you get at

Girls under 16

After a couple of weeks of rainouts the Wilmington girls under 16 team finally played its first game of the season. Wilmington hosted a team from Andover and started its attack early.

At the 15 minute mark of the first half Erin McKenna passed to Cara Scalse for Wilmington's first goal. Ten minutes later, Andrea Ducey scored with an assist to Ellen DeMarco. The half ended 2-0 Wilmington.

Early in the second half Sara Soule fed a perfect pass to Erin McKenna for Wilmington's third goal. Just before the game ended, Soule and McKenna paired up again for a score with Sara assisting Erin.

The team worked hard for this 4-0 victory, with Kristin Daley and Andrea DiLeo each playing a half as goalkeeper and they played superbly for the shutout. Katy Palm and Nikki Zarella were standouts at fullback and Ginny Cosgrove played great at center halfback. This was definitely a total team effort.

The girls' second contest was also with an Andover team. This time they played at Andover. Andover opened the scoring at the 12 minute point when one of their forwards broke in alone for a breakaway goal. This quick start by Andover did not destroy Wilmington's intensity. Jennifer Aprile, Krista Pagliarulo and Nicole Bouchie helped generate some needed offense from their halfback positions and it eventually paid off.

Just past the midway point Sara Soule broke down left wing and carried the ball about 60 yards for a great unassisted goal to tie the score. The half ended 1-1 with some great work by fullbacks Margie Rega and Suzy Walsh.

At the beginning of the second half, Wilmington took the lead when right winger Erin McKenna made a fine run down her wing and then placed a perfect crossing pass in front of the Andover goal which forward Andrea Ducey headed in for a very pretty goal.

Forwards Cara Scalse and Erin McKenna came close to a few other goals but were stifled by some good Andover defense. With only four minutes to play a long Andover pass to an offside right winger resulted in a breakaway goal for the 2-2 final score. Kristen Daley played the entire game in goal and was tremendous, making many spectacular saves.

Once again the girls combined team play to its utmost. It was a pleasure to watch how well they played. The girls team this year is sponsored by a generous contribution from Campbell's Country Chef.

Boys' under 14 I

The Wilmington boys under 14 I team has begun its season in perfect fashion. On September 12 they travelled to Medford and came away with a 6-0 victory on the strength of a well balanced, total team effort. After only one minute John Lynch scored from a pass by Jimmy DeMarco. Just four minutes later DeMarco crossed the ball in front of Medford's goal and Lynch headed it in for Wilmington's second goal. At the 10 minute mark Anthony Bonariggo scored after Jimmy DeMarco took a direct kick from near the left sideline. Near the end of the first half, Lynch scored his third goal unassisted on a well played breakaway.

Wilmington picked up in the second half where it left off when Gerard Forgett fed a great pass to Jimmy DeMarco for a goal at the four minute mark. Anthony Bonariggo then closed out the scoring 10 minutes later on a nice goal from right wing with a fine assist to Tommy Zaya. Mark Zambarnardi, at halfback, and Brian Wallace at forward, had many good offensive efforts for Wilmington.

The defensive work of Mike King and David Dussault along with Eric Flynn's superb goalkeeping were strong contributions to the shutout victory.

The boys then visited North Andover and played a super game. Despite playing into the wind, Wilmington scored at the 27 minute mark of the first half when John Lynch made a nice crossing pass which Gerard Forgett blasted home for a 1-0 lead. This was the score at the end of the half.

At the two minute mark of half number two, Lynch got his second assist when Jimmy DeMarco struck paydirt. Just six minutes later Lynch took a throw-in which DeMarco put into the net for a 3-0 Wilmington lead. After 10 minutes more of exciting play, Wilmington halfback Christian Armata took a high shot from the right wing about 30 yards away and scored. Five minutes later Mike King scored from his right wing position with the assist to John Lynch, his fourth of the game.

Right before the game ended Eric Flynn lofted a ball into the air from his fullback position which scored into the top right corner for the final 6-0 final.

John Martins was excellent in goal making many saves, especially in the first half when the strong wind hurt Wilmington's chances to move the ball. Tommy Killilea and David Oatis played very well at both fullback and halfback.

Once again the boys showed they are unified squad committed to playing good team soccer. They eagerly look forward to their future games. The boys are sponsored this year by Analog Devices.

Boys under 12 I

Wilmington 6 Melrose 0

On opening day the boys traveled to Burlington to face an experienced team on their home field. After the first 15 minutes of play, when the opening day jitters disappeared, the boys started playing as a team and kept the ball in the opponents end of the field for the majority of the game. At the 20 minute mark of the first half, Mike LaCorcia scored the first goal of the season from a pass by the right halfback Paul Bruno.

At the 10 minute mark of the second half, fullback John Lynch scored the second Wilmington goal with a 30 yard blast. The team kept the pressure on for the entire game, with forwards Andrew Armata, Pat Cahill, Eric Shaffer, Brian Malesczek and David DeSantis, and halfbacks Mike Moore, Andrew Pagliarulo, Paul Bruno and John MacKinnon.

The fullback line was led by Craig Metcalfe, with contributions made by Brian Surran, Doug Olender and Rich Maynard, Jeff Morin made several fantastic saves in goal to boast Wilmington's first shutout of the season. Final score, Wilmington 2, Burlington 0.

After weeks of rain delays the team travelled to Melrose for their second game of the season. From the opening kickoff the game was played on Melrose's half of the field with Wilmington players finding a Melrose goalie who would not allow a goal, however, at the 24 minute mark of the first half, Eric Shaffer scored from a pass by Brian Malesczek to break the ice.

The first 17 minutes of the second half proved to be frustrating for Wilmington as open net shots were missed and a good Melrose goalie was doing his job. It took an Andrew Pagliarulo pass to Pat Cahill for a score to change the direction of the game. The team started to play as a team and within six minutes scored five more times. John MacKinnon scored on a left footed shot from the right side. Within three minutes, Michael LaCorcia scored three times for his first hat trick. Final score, Wilmington 6, Melrose 0.

The team's first home game was Saturday, October 4 at Shawshen Field. The team would like to thank its sponsor Greys Appliance for its contribution to Wilmington Youth Soccer.

Boys under 12-II

The team remained undefeated against a strong Burlington team with a 4-1 win. This was the toughest game played by Wilmington this year and thanks to Richie Barden and Garrett Whittemore it was a successful one.

The first goal was scored by, none other than Chris Gill with an assist by Danny King. Timmy Allard came back with several outstanding shots, but good goaltending by Burlington kept him from scoring.

Shawn Barden kept the pressure on by scoring the second goal of the game.

After many scoring attempts by Burlington, fullbacks Rob Bentley, Keith Audette, and Kevin O'Leary managed to get control of the ball, allowing Danny King to score the third goal.

The second half of the game was action packed, with Burlington scoring its' only goal of the game. The Wilmington team overpowered them with aggressive play by the offense and defense, allowing mighty Danny King score the fourth goal, assisted by Chris Gill, finishing off the scoring by the Wilmington team. The boys are sponsored this year by F&R Auto Supply.

Boys under 10-1

Two wins over Waltham (3-0) and over Burlington (8-0), both this past week have brought the boys' record up to 2-0-1. The game against Waltham was made up on Tuesday from the rainout. Because of traffic problems (late start) the game was shortened and ended in the dark. In spite of that the boys played very well. Fullbacks Brian Carroll, Greg Dennis and Chris DiJulia along with goalies Mark Wallace and Dave Bennett maintained the shutout.

The first goal was scored early in the first half, unassisted by Michael Caira. Michael Marsi scored the second goal assisted by Tim Duggan. The third goal was scored in the second half, nearly in the dark by Steven Holland, assisted by Michael Martinello. Over all it was a good game for the Michael's.

In the last game against Burlington many people got into the scoring act. Fullbacks and goalies Billy Harrison, and Michael Martinello did not see much action. The scoring was pretty well balanced between players with four goals in each half.

The first goal was hard, high outside shot by Michael Martinello, assist by Mike Caira. The second goal was by Michael Caira and this time assisted by Andy Kane, third goal by Steven Holland assisted by Kevin Tildsley. The fourth goal, again by Mike Martinello, this time assisted by Ryan Hoffman. The second half started off with a goal by Mark Wallace with a beautiful setup pass from Billy Harrison. Andy Kane contributed two more goals in the second half assisted from Ryan Hoffman and Steven Holland. Mark Wallace chipped in a second goal in the second half.

Boys under 12-II

The Wilmington team won its season opener featuring excellent goaltending by Richie Barden and Garrett Whittemore, against Reading with a 4-0 score.

David Maglio scored the first goal within three minutes of the game with a penalty kick. Chris Gill kept the pressure on by scoring the next two goals in the first half.

The second half began with a beautiful goal from Shawn Barden. Throughout the game Ryan Swasey, with his powerful kick, managed to keep the ball away from the opposing side with much help from fullbacks Rob Bentley, Keith Audette and Kevin O'Leary.

The team had great support from Eric Jones who cheered on from the sideline with a broken wrist.

In the second game, Wilmington outplayed Beverly with territorial advantage to a 7-0 win.

Goalies Richie Barden and Garrett Whittemore had a "restful" game while the rest of the team had a real workout.

Chris Gill scored two outstanding goals within minutes of the first half. Shawn Barden kept the pressure on with goal number three, with a little help from his friend, Timmy Allard.

The constant pressure in the second half was kept on by Shawn Barden's second goal, making the score 4-0.

After good scoring attempts by Danny King and Paul Heigham, Chris Gill scored his third goal of the game.

Outstanding play at halfback positions by Stephen Shaw and John Florence helped Phil Florence score number six with a great assist from Bill Bates.

Girls under 12-I

The girls are off to a great start with powerful shutout victories over Medford (4-0) and Chelmsford (7-0).

Shannon Jepson scored the hat trick (three goals) in the Medford game. Jaime Forgett also chipped in with a goal. The goal scorers were assisted by the sparkling play of Laura DeMarco, Emily Dehoff, Jackie Hayden, Karen DeFrancesco and Erin Falzone. Adrienne Fay controlled the center of the field for the victors and made several key passes.

The Chelmsford game was a scoreless tie until late in the first half. With only a few minutes remaining before the halftime break, Shannon Jepson slammed the ball into the far corner of the net. Less than a minute later Jaime Forgett drilled the ball into the goal giving the local team a 2-0 lead going into the second half.

The team dominated the remainder of the game scoring five more goals. Jill Murphy, Heather Pillsbury, Nancy Pote (two), and Amy Hermann notched goals. The fullback corps of Erin Gilhooly, Mary Armata, Denise Langone and Lynette Shano controlled their half of the field and had two superior games.

Special congratulations are in order for the netminders, Mary Armata, Denise Langone, Erin Falzone and Nancy Pote who have yet to allow the opponents a score.

Tewksbury's Allan Sanborn's idea

Grab this pillow in a fire

By JIM ROUILLARD

Allan Sanborn wants to know what a cured ham feels like.

So he has offered to spend time in smoke-filled rooms — without promise of political gain.

Maybe that's why his wife sometimes thinks he's soft — on the subject of pillows, at least.

The 32-year-old Sanborn — a leisure-time Tewksbury hunter and father of three — is also a fisherman and full-time fire prevention advocate who has state fire officials nibbling with interest on an idea which may save thousands of lives each year.

The smoke-filled rooms of Sanborn's world are not political bargain centers — but the State Fire Academy's controlled fire test rooms which serve as mock-ups of what in real-life emergency situations can become swift chambers of death.

And the pillow of which he speaks is no ordinary one — but a simple, inexpensive device which tests indicate can prevent smoke inhalation by filtering the dense air of a burning structure for up to 45 minutes — and save between 25,000 and 50,000 lives a year nationwide — including the lives of infants — according to Sanborn and others.

How? The pillow has no valves or adjustments, and slips easily over your head or works simply by holding it to your face, reports Ken Woodward, educational specialist for California's Center for Emergency Preparedness and Provisioning.

Woodward added that the pillow can be used to help save infants since a person can bring the infant's face up snug against the outside of the same pillow, enabling both adult and infant to breathe through one device.

Invented by a Missouri stone mason after he heard of the 1980 MGM Grand Hotel fire in Las Vegas which claimed 87 lives, the pillow (known by the unlikely but rhythmical name of the "Jalypso filter") is filled with polystyrene pellets treated with oil-based chemicals which absorb smoke before it can reach the lungs.

Introduced for the first time at a 1986 Red Cross conference on earthquake hazards in San Francisco, the pillow has been tested extensively and could be a life-saving device for business, schools, hotels or in the home, according to the manufacturer.

"It can buy you time to escape," Woodward said. "Many times people who do not die in fires end up with smoke-inhalation injuries that require hospitalization and expensive care."

The pillow, he added, "not only saves lives, but reduces the chance of injury." Tests at the University of Missouri, he said, determined that the pillow filtered 71 per cent of the smoke particulates which passed into it.

Other tests, according to Sanborn, were made in burning rooms with highly toxic building materials such as vinyl wallpaper, rubber-backed carpet, pine boards, electric cable and motor oil.

Woodward said users of the pillow, which can easily fit into a desk drawer, can breathe normally since there is no noticeable change of air flow.

Sanborn added that in nine live fire tests throughout the nation the filter has extended breathing time capacity from between 12 and 45 minutes — and that just a few minutes can spell the difference between life and death or serious injury.

Sanborn supplied the details of a Princeton Township, New Jersey test involving four firefighters who remained safe — rather like the three little pigs — in their three-story brick smokehouse. But only one wore a smoke filtering pillow — and he was able to stay the longest.

The others wore air-packs (self-contained breathing apparatus) and had to leave the smokehouse during the test to change their oxygen canisters.

During the test, bales of hay were set afire in the basement, and the smoke rose upward through the stairwells and special vents located throughout the structure.

Firefighter Jody Gorran said that during the 45 minutes of the test, while wearing the smoke pillow, he was able to walk around, climb to the second floor, and return to the first floor.

"Smoke conditions during the 45 minutes went from light to very heavy. Visibility during the last 15 minutes of the test was limited to no more than one foot as the structure was then fully charged with smoke."

Gorran said that though he could "taste" the smoke, and he experienced a slight burning sensation in his throat, he had no difficulty in breathing during the 45 minutes he remained in the smokehouse — and though he had to draw deeper breaths towards the end of the test, he never coughed or experienced any choking sensation.

The test was ended at 45 minutes, not because Gorran was having trouble breathing but because he was "just getting tired of sitting in the smokehouse."

Sanborn, a 15-year veteran of the security and alarm systems industry, supplied further technical data on the gases generated by various types of fires, some complicated data and distressing statistics — as well as impressive testimonials

A moving experience

A friend of ours who manages a moving company stopped by the other day to tell us about an incident that occurred to two of his employees recently. Due to the bizarre nature of this incident, we have had to take some literary license to protect those involved:

"It all started when we received a phone call from this old lady who lived in Reading," our friend began. "Her husband had passed away some time ago, her children were all grown up and on their own, and she had arranged to move to Florida, apparently to be close to one of her daughters, who was also moving down to Florida."

Our friend, whom we shall refer to as Bill, made arrangements with this elderly woman to move her belongings from Reading to St. Petersburg. Several days later two employees of the moving company arrived at her house.

Bill continued the story: "My two guys proceeded to pack the old woman's belongings. It's a simple enough routine: they put everything in boxes and then the next day they show up to load the boxes on the truck and move her. Well, the next day, when they showed up at her house to load the truck, they discovered the old lady had passed away overnight."

Bill's drivers decided the best thing to do was call the police. Before they had the chance, an unexpected visitor showed up at the old woman's house.

"It was the old lady's son-in-law," Bill went on. "He must have known his mother-in-law had died during the night, because he didn't seem too surprised to find her lying dead in her bed. My guys asked him if he'd notified the police. Well, he hadn't."

At this point, the son-in-law presented Bill's drivers with an unusual request. "He asked them if they would do him a big favor. He claimed he couldn't afford the cost of a hearse to transport his mother-in-law's body to Florida, where he wanted to bury her. So he asked my guys if they would mind packing her in the truck and driving her down to Florida, along with all her belongings."

Bill's drivers had enough sense to tell the old woman's son-in-law they could not transport her body in the truck. Bill described what happened next: "When they told him no, he asked them to do him another favor instead. He said, 'Look, then do you mind just

Having a baby?

The national average length of a hospital stay for delivery of a baby is now 2½ days, down dramatically from a decade ago when 5-to-7 days were considered normal. So says Dr. Philip H. Sheridan, medical director of Efficient Health Systems, Inc., a Skokie, Ill., leader in health care management programs for employers.

Dr. Sheridan notes that the 2½-day average stay is for an uncomplicated natural delivery. He says the shorter period is a result of a number of factors, including:

Many mothers' preference to recuperate in the comfort of their homes, where they can begin to care for their babies on their own schedule.

Concern that prolonged hospitalization could increase the risk of the mother or newborn baby contracting infections.

Dr. Sheridan says that hospital costs for maternity have been on the rise, and now range from $400 to $600 per day on a national average.

"Hospitalization for maternity cases was longer 10 years ago partly because of society's view that the hospital stay served as a semi-vacation for mothers as they recuperated. Today's women seem to prefer to leave the institution as soon as possible, instead choosing less expensive auxiliary home care, such as practical nurses or child care professionals," he said.

Efficient Health Systems, Inc., organized in 1984, provides health care cost management programs to employers. The company operates a leading comprehensive health care utilization review (UR) program nationally, and a preferred provider organization (PPO) serving metropolitan Chicago. Headquartered in Skokie, Ill., the privately held company has branches in New York City and Atlanta.

Fine evening at Community Concerts

The sage Auerbach has written, "Music removes from our souls the dust of everyday life." Linda Maxey's performance on the Marimba in Stoneham last Monday night was just that and a very special musical treat. Monday night was her first appearance in New England. She is truly a virtuoso artist, playing an unusual concert instrument.

The Stoneham High School hall was well filled, the intense level of interest and excitement could be felt. One could hear the proverbial pin drop before each piece.

She played fifteen or so numbers, including traditional music for the marimba, including a Rondo by Mozart and Kreisler, and Gypsy affairs by Pablo Sarasate. Latin music seems to be particularly adaptable to her instrument. She performed her arrangement of "Summertime" and "Oh, I Can't Sit Down" by Gershwin and Wild, and the "Yorkshire Ballad" by James Barnes. Especially enjoyable were her arrangements from Bizet's original score of Carmen, the familiar "Toreador Song," "La Seguidilla" and the "Gypsy Song."

Did I hear a marimba? Yes. I closed my eyes to listen more intently. I also heard an organ strain, a piccolo, the lovely sounds of a flute. I heard the tinkling of bells, the tiny, bubbly sounds of a toy piano, the legato of a violin. Often with as many as four mallets in hand, she struck the keys so rapidly one was barely aware of the ticking or striking itself.

I, as an audience member, like an artist to talk to me - to explain some interesting facts about his or her instrument, and to highlight the significant qualities of the music played. It's true thoughtfulness of the artist for the audience. I feel a sense of distance and separation if they do not. The music of the world is so vast, that even the specialist in one aspect of it, knows little, and the average concert-goer even less. It's a true compliment to the audience when they communicate with us with a light touch, a wink of comedy, making a bond between the artist and members of the audience. The audience comes away with a feeling of having known the performer/artist and a bit of his or her music.

This Maxey did. She said that she was often asked, "What is the difference between a xylophone and marimba?" She explained that a xylophone has only the upper range of a marimba; both have bars of wood, hers of rosewood, and both have the equivalent of the black and white keys of the piano. A third mallet instrument, the vibraphone, is electronic with metal bars. "Now," shaking her finger at the audience and with a smile, "You know the difference!"

She demonstrated her mallets. The striking ball is wound with yarns, covered with a variety of materials, and the shafts may be made of aluminum, birch or other materials. She then demonstrated the soft to loud sounds of a number of mallets, produced by her method of striking the bars. With a wink she commented emphatically, "And they are not clubs, as one man called them!"

An enthusiastic standing ovation brought the evening to a close. She played two encores, "The Flight of the Bumblebee" (violin music seems perfect for her instrument) and the beloved "Amazing Grace."

When the audience had reluctantly left, I joined a few stage-door Johnnies and Marias to ask questions and to watch as she and her assistants disassembled and folded her instrument for her air trip home. In an informal interview she said that her marimba was especially made for her, has an unusual wide range, and will fold into a compact package weighing 300 pounds, but fitting into her Toyota when she is not travelling by air. She has played many times in the West, North and South, but not until this night in New England. I believe she was pleased with her reception here.

Now you can see what Community Concert Associations can do! They introduce new fantastic artists to your back door!

If you didn't go, you missed an evening of great entertainment! Before you miss more, you ought to call Mrs. Zussman Freeman at 438-0835, or Mrs. Donald Hanson, 438-0701, and join so you can enjoy the remaining three concerts: The Aurora Trio on October 19, The Robert De Cormier Singers on April 16, 1988 (both at 8 p.m.) and the Greater Boston Youth Symphony Orchestra at 7:30 p.m. on May 21, 1988 after their Japan tour. Also view many other concerts in reciprocal towns in Massachusetts and New England.

Memberships may also be obtained at the door before each concert.

B&D in a select group

B&D House of Carpets, Inc., 286 Cambridge Street, Burlington, has joined a select group of stores that have installed Armstrong's new Floor Fashion Center department.

A notable feature of the new department is its "Floor Information Center" which contains a computer-controlled laser videodisc player. At the touch of a button, shoppers can view demonstrations which help answer questions most frequently asked in purchasing a new vinyl floor. The Information Center also provides advice on decorating, installation, and proper floor care.

The department is a totally integrated shopping environment including extra large samples of floors. Labels on the front and back of the samples provide all necessary product information and show the floor in a full-color room setting.

The shopping environment also includes a special viewing area that allows consumers to see a floor sample under the light conditions in their own home. The area is surrounded with mirrors allowing consumers to see what a larger expanse of the floor would look like.

Floor Fashion Center stores have the largest selection of Armstrong floors - over 300 patterns and colors. They offer easy credit terms and offer a warranty on both the floor material and installation. Their salespeople and installers have been trained by Armstrong to provide professional service.

Babysitting course offered

Babysitters should know how to handle emergencies, as well as routine problems, when caring for younger children. The Babysitter's Class at New England Memorial Hospital (NEMH), in Stoneham, will teach babysitters the skills they need to supervise children properly and safely. The four-week course teaches first-aid basics, accident prevention, baby-diapering, ethics, and self-confidence. Successful completion of the class, which includes quizzes, results in certification for boys and girls ages 10 and older.

The Babysitter's Class is held in the NEMH Auditorium on Wednesday afternoons from 3:30 to 5 p.m., beginning October 7. The cost is $25. For more information, or to register for the program, please call the NEMH Center for Health Promotion at 665-1740, extension 426.

RAILROAD EMPLOYEES SOUGHT

The Boston and Maine Railroad Historical Society, a non-profit educational organization founded in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts in 1971, is seeking all former Boston and Maine Railroad employees.

During this, the 16th year of the organization, a membership goal of "2,000 in '87" has been set. Approximately 400 people are needed to meet that goal and help preserve the colorful and rich history of the Boston and Maine Railroad.

The Society maintains an archival collection at the University of Lowell Lydon Library, where thousands of artifacts and photos documenting the history of the railroad are available to researchers and others during school hours.

The organization's officers stress that the Society is in no way connected with the Boston and Maine Corporation or its parent company, Guilford Transportation Industries. They simply wish to contact as many former railroaders as possible, to share in this important preservation project.

Woodchips

By ANTHONY MANCONI

By ANTHONY MANCONI

I don't think I've ever heard a more ecumenical hymn than, "Let There Be Peace On Earth and Let It Begin With Me!" If we would only try to put those words and the others in that hymn into everyday practice — brothers and sisters, what a beautiful world this would and could be. Bill McGarr said to Warren Clement, "Do you believe in justice?" "I sure do," replied Warren, "I believe that I'm just as good as you!" Fr. John Crispo said to the usher, "There's a man asleep in the third pew — go and wake him up." "With all due respects," said the usher, "you put him to sleep, Father, you wake him up."

My grandmother was hard of hearing but she refused to wear a modern hearing aid. She preferred to use an ear trumpet that belonged to her mother. I took her to church with me last Christmas Eve. An usher noticed the ear trumpet on the pew so he whispered to me (loud enough for everyone to hear) "If I hear one 'toot' out of that thing, out she goes and you with her."

Bob Burns, manager of the Woburn Elks, went to an eye clinic last week. He walked into a room where a pretty nurse was combing her hair in front of a mirror. "I have to have my eyes examined," he explained. "I should say you do," she snapped, "you're in the ladies' room!" Later the doctor asked, "Mr. Burns, do you have contacts?" "Yes, I do," he said. "Mayor John Rabbitt is a personal friend of mine, Paul Haggerty is a valued friend and also Grace Boutwell, who I have known for years." "Can you read the chart on that wall?" "I can't pronounce the words, but I can tell you what the letters are." The doctor excused himself to get a couple of aspirins then asked, "Does everyone in your family use glasses?" "All except Uncle Eddie, who drinks straight from the bottle." After that Bob went to have the prescription filled, the doctor went for therapy and the nurse put a lock on the ladies' room door.

Vinny Harrington of Reading took a Grandfather's clock out of his station wagon and was carrying it to a clock repair shop when he bumped into a woman shopper, knocking a parcel out of her hands. "Oh, please excuse me," Vinny said, "I'm sorry, can I help you pick it up?" "No thank you," she replied, "but tell me, why the heck don't you carry a wrist watch like everyone else does?" The sign over the clock repair shop door said, "If your clock doesn't 'tick' to you 'lock' to us."

My aunt Nina from Wilmington is over 80 but she still drives a car. As a matter of fact, she's a hotrod. She paid a $20 fine for speeding last week and was given a receipt for it. "What the heck do I do with this?" she snapped. The clerk smiled and said, "Lady, save it and when you have four of them, you get to ride a bicycle!"

Machines are taking the place of a lot of things — but, they can never replace the love shown by a dog as you come home from work and it runs to you in "leaks and bounds." When I come home it's a lot different with my wife Kathy. I came home last night and I said, "Hello, remember me?" She looked and said, "Oh, it's you again." "I cooked a fish dinner for you and the cat ate it." "That's okay," I replied, "I can always get you another cat!" "By the way," she said, "here's a letter for you, I thought it was for me and I 'steamed' it open by mistake."

I don't get any respect at home. I said to Danny, "You don't know which side your bread is buttered on." "What difference does it make," he replied, "I'm going to eat both sides anyway."

"How would you like to see a floor show?" I asked Kathy. "I sure would," she said as she ran to the closet to get her coat. "Wait a minute," I said, "I mean get a shovel and 'dust' the kitchen floor, maybe if you scrape hard enough the floor will show!" "Folks, I'll be eating in restaurants for a month after that broadside. (No pun intended.)

Who said that women are the weaker sex? And that they belong at home and not in the business world? Well, I never said that and I never will. To prove my point — just today I met two beautiful dedicated young ladies who are investigators for the FDA in Winchester. They are two of many women who work for the U.S. Food and Drug Administration under the capable leadership of Mr. James Beebe, Regional Director of all the New England States as well as New York. Mr. Beebe is from Wakefield and, I'm proud to say, a long time fan of Woodchips. The ladies I met are Diane Prince and Mary Pat Couig. Mary was resplendent wearing the uniform of the U.S. Public Health, in which she is a commander. If her picture were on a recruiting poster, I am sure there would be "waves," of volunteers. It's been a long, long time since I spoke to a Commander. He was the captain of USS Kenneth Bailey DD 713. On my first day on the ship he stopped me on deck and asked, "Sailor, what's port?" My spontaneous answer was, "I think it's a red wine, Sir." I was transferred to the USS Allagash, a Navy oiler, the next day. Because I carried a joke too far, I spent the next two years, skidding, sliding, and slipping on her oil slick decks. When the ship put into Italy for repairs, I spent two weeks sightseeing. I went to Venice and took a ride on a gondola. I saw a sign on a bridge over a canal that said, "Ducka your heada — Low-Low Bridgida." (There was an actress by that name.) I went to Sardinia, where my father was born. I was just in time to attend my cousin Maria's wedding. The wine flowed like water at the reception. I wanted to kiss the bride but she said, "Lips that touch wine will never touch mine!" "That's okay Maria," I said, "I never kiss anyone with a moustache anyway."

The Wilmington Grange, Patrons of Husbandry, recently installed their officers. They are Jeanette Rocco, Myrtle Stanley, Barbara Desharnale, Ellen Hitchings, and Mary Howard. I must admit that I had to look Husbandry up in the dictionary. It has many meanings but they all prove to me that you are all wonderful ladies.

North Reading Rainbow Girls, participating at the installation ceremonies September 19, were: Debbie Bailey, Cheryl Noseworthy, Christina Saslow, Carol Higgins, Laurel Gore, Heather Riddell, and Carol O'Neill. I don't know why I didn't marry a Rainbow Girl. Kathy thought I was a rainbow something; she imagined that I had a "pot of gold." She admitted that she thought that I was well off before she married me. I didn't help matters when I said, "I know now that I was 'well off,' before I married you but after the ceremony it was too late." Woodchips congratulates Mr. and Mrs. George McMahon of North Reading who celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary. It is indeed a remarkable achievement in an era when some marriages don't last even 50 days. You and couples like you are the solid rock foundation of America that made this nation great. Thank you for the fine example you give us all.

Woodchips lost a dear fan and valued friend in the loss of John Gaffney of the Woburn Times staff. My condolences to his wife and family.

John Gaffney

Not until each loom is silent
And the shuttles cease to fly
That's when God, unfolds the pattern
And explains the reason why.

The dark threads are as needed
In the weaver's skillful hand
As the threads of gold and silver
For the pattern which is planned.

John Gaffney was chosen from this life
And beckoned to come home
To a place prepared for all of us
When this world no more we'll roam

Welcome John, with all your love
As he comes to you today.
Embrace him in your arms, oh Lord,
For this we humbly pray.

Selective Service registration required for Postal Service

The federal government's largest employer — the Postal Service — recently announced Selective Service registration requirements for employment. Under the new guidelines, a young man must prove that he has registered with Selective Service before being eligible for appointment to a position in the Postal Service.

This requirement follows the Thurmond/Montgomery Amendment to the Fiscal Year 1986 Department of Defense Authorization Act. The Amendment prohibits a young man who is required to register from being appointed to a position in an executive agency at the federal government unless he had registered. The intent of the legislation was to ensure that all men required by law to register do so.

Rep. Gerald Solomon (R-NY), a strong supporter of Selective Service, introduced legislation in July requiring registration as a prerequisite to employment with the Postal Service. Technically the Postal Service was not included in the Original Thurmond/Montgomery Amendment because they are not an executive agency of the federal government. Commenting on the legislation, Mr. Solomon said, "If a young man is going to accept the benefits of this country then he should be ready and willing to accept the responsibilities as well. Registration is one of these responsibilities."

As of mid-August, all young men who are 18 through 25 years of age must show proof of registration before being considered for a position with the Postal Service. Those young men who do not reach 18 until after appointment will be asked to submit proof within 30 days of their 18th birthday.

Along with federal employment, Selective Service registration has been linked to federal student aid and job training benefits. Many states also require registration as a prerequisite for state student aid, entrance into a state supported college or university and state employment.

All young men must register with Selective Service at any local post office within 30 days of their 18th birthday. Failure to register is a felony punishable by up to 5 years in prison and/or up to a $250,000 fine.

Like Father, Like Son

Like Father, Like Son Starring Dudley Moore, Kirk Cameron, Sean Astin. Directed by Rod Daniel. Produced by Brian Grazer and David Valdes. Written by Lorne Cameron and Steven L. Bloom. Rated PG-13 (profanity).

Alfred Hitchcock used to call it a McGuffin. It's that plot device used to get the action rolling which then becomes unimportant to the plot. In the case of Like Father, Like Son, the McGuffin is a potion that allows people to trade minds. It's a little trick of the Navajos that an eccentric archeologist picks up and tells to his nephew Trigger (Sean Astin). With a name like Trigger, you don't expect this kid to be anything but wild and wacky. And since the script was written to formula, he's just that.

Trigger corrals his buddy Chris (Kirk Cameron) into experimenting with the formula he swiped from his strange uncle. But after trying this stuff, which is stored in a Tabasco sauce jar, on the family pets, they just leave it lying around for Chris's dad (Dudley Moore) to pour into his Bloody Mary. The next person Dad takes a long look at is his son Chris, and presto, whammo, they change minds.

Not terribly original, is it? Especially when you think that Disney gave us this same story 10 years ago with Freaky Friday. But Moore, Cameron and Astin are all so cute that it's hard not to like this movie, or at least, to dislike it. Moore, playing Moore, is always enjoyable, even if his range is limited to that signature laugh and wry sense of humor. It is Cameron who is the real, and only, surprise.

This 16-year-old star of "Growing Pains" has made the transition from TV to film without a glitch. When Cameron takes on the mannerisms of an adult, you believe him more than Moore's twitchy tribute to youth. Cameron has an economy of style that isn't as apparent on television, but comes across smoothly on a big screen.

The supporting players are on a par with Cameron, as Astin manages to be both affable and raffish in the buddy role and Margaret Colin draws up all six feet of her and fairly sizzles. Colin has a presence that supercedes her obvious physical attractions, a fact patently obvious in her TV show, Legwork. If producers can find something for her to do other than vamp, she should have a fairly long career ahead of her.

However, and here is where the adults are going to part company from the kids, the storyline is a tad impalpable. Think about it, even for a second, and it's gone.

where they want it. Entertainment means escapism, so the movies tend toward musicals, tight sweaters and jingoism while the magazines are about the movie stars. The newspapers write about the war. Except for the two years that Ellsworth "Sonny" Wisecarver, also known as "The Woo Woo Kid," gets his mug into the paper on an ongoing basis. Seems the 15-year-old kid keeps running off with married women. Elopes even.

LIKE FATHER, LIKE SON Trigger (Sean Astin) tries to snap his best friend Chris (Kirk Cameron) out of a love trance with the girl of his dreams.

But hey, the movie is really for kids and it serves its purpose because it is enjoyable if you're young enough not to wonder why the plot doesn't always make sense. But those of us who are bothered by inconsistencies are none too happy that this was co-produced by Brian Grazer, a man who used to look for originality in his projects. It's a long way down the artistic spire from Splash to Like Father, Like Son. True, he did team up with Daniel Valdes, so it's not all his fault, but you just expect more than foam and froth when you see his name. Of course, now that he's producing shows for TV like O'Hara and the defunct Spies Like Us, he may just have lowered his standards. Too bad, it will probably lower his box office returns as well.

Setting: Southern California. Year: 1944. America is at war. The men are away, the women are in the factories and rationing has kept money in people's pockets, not exactly was too bad. But big bucks were spent, research was done, and it feels no more like 1944 than yesterday did. There aren't that many original ideas to be found in the movies and this one was squandered on a mediocre production. Just being inoffensive and mildly cute isn't good enough when tickets go for $5.50 a pop.

First of all, writer/director Phil Alden Robinson should be given a broom and a new job for providing some of the dialogue. A stilted reference to a "hamburger sandwich" is thrown in as a time frame, while Wisecarver's dad sleepily mutters an off-color catchphrase widely used today, but not often, if ever, heard in 1944.

It also would have helped if In the Mood hadn't been played as a straight comedy. The 21-year-old woman who ran off with Wisecarver had a common-law spouse and two children. She was unhappy and confused and desperately in need of some fun. Why wasn't this played up? And, while we're asking, what was so unnervingly attractive about Wisecarver? Or at least, as Wisecarver is portrayed by Patrick Dempsey.

He's one of those young actors who kinda mugs, kinda whines for the camera, managing to get under your skin, not next to your heart. He shows embarrassment by hunching his shoulders over and hiding his face, while his passion looking exceedingly earnest and his casual stances are all delivered with the same expression of ennui. Dempsey shows a lot of room for improvement and not much hope of doing so.

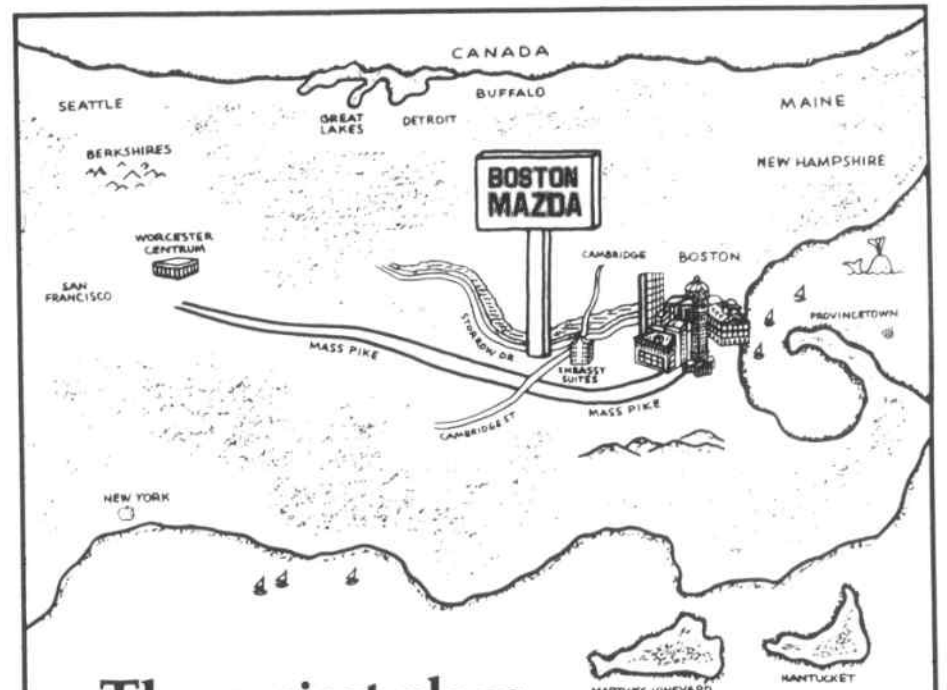

On a kinder note, Beverly D'Angelo, while a little long in the tooth to be playing a 25-year-old woman, is delightful as a brassy, bored Marine's wife who wants to see what Sonny is all about. She's surer, more seasoned, not moving on the same frenzied, slapstick pace as the rest of the movie.

In the Mood will undoubtedly look much better on cable, but if you can't wait, here's a bit of trivia — the real Wisecarver shows up in a cameo role as a mailman in a "man on the street" newsreel interview.

IRS tips for people age 65

If you're 65 or older, the Internal Revenue Service says to take an additional standard deduction amount for age on your tax returns for 1987 and later tax years. The additional amount is $750 for single individuals and $600 for married individuals.

Not only that, if your spouse is also 65 or older, and you're filing a joint return, you can claim two additional amounts, one for you and one for your spouse. You are considered 65 on the day before your 65th birthday, the IRS says.

The total standard deduction for a single individual age 65 or over for 1987 is $3,750 ($4,500 if also blind).

For a married couple filing a joint return, the total standard deduction for 1987 is $5,600 if one spouse is 65 or older and $6,200 if both spouses are 65 or older. If one or both spouses are also blind, the amounts are higher.

For further information on this, call the IRS at 1-800-424-3676 to order Publication 553, "Highlights of 1986 Tax Changes."

For information on other benefits you may be eligible for, order Publication 554, "Tax Information for Older Americans."

Scared to open your closet? Organize it yourself

By Peter Tongue
Staff writer of The Christian Science Monitor

The advertisement had considerable appeal: closet woes would disappear, order would replace chaos, and storage space would increase dramatically by having closet interiors reorganized with custom-designed hanging rods, drawer space, tie racks, and shoe holders. But the estimate - around $1,000 for two closets - made the Boston homeowner think twice. At that price, he reasoned, an orderly closet might have to wait a while.

In fact, the waiting period was brief. A closet-organizer kit, uncovered at a local hardware store a week later, and a few hours with a Phillips screwdriver were all it took to completely make over two closets in a professional-looking manner. The product, vinyl-covered steel rods and wire, cost little more than $100.

What is sometimes termed the "ventilated drawer" system began to take over the do-it-yourself closet organizer market some five years ago, but "skyrocketed this year," according to Ian Gittlitz, editor and publisher of Housewares, the New York-based trade magazine.

"Some manufacturer's figures show 30 to 40 percent increases over last year," he says.

Judith Miley of Clairson International, whose Closet Maid line has propelled it to the top spot among United States manufacturers, confirms this. So does Edward Meixel, head of Wire World, US subsidiary of the Swiss company Metaltex SA that helped pioneer coated-wire technology 42 years ago. Metaltex is the world's largest manufacturer of coated-wire products.

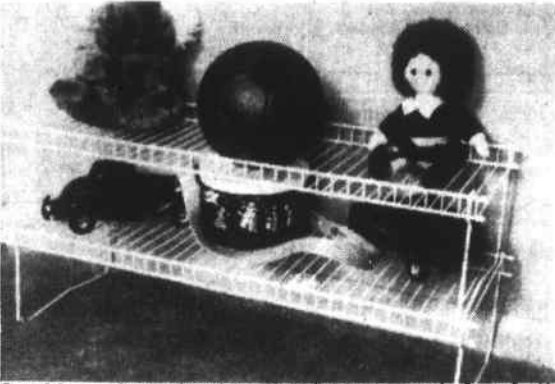

As people came to recognize the importance of well-organized space in today's smaller apartments, condominiums, and somewhat smaller new homes, vinyl-covered wire products "took off," Mr. Gittlitz says. The fact that they come in "every fashionable color available" has spurred the trend, in his view. "People know: storage doesn't have to be ugly any more."

There are other reasons, too, for the growing popularity of coated-wire products.

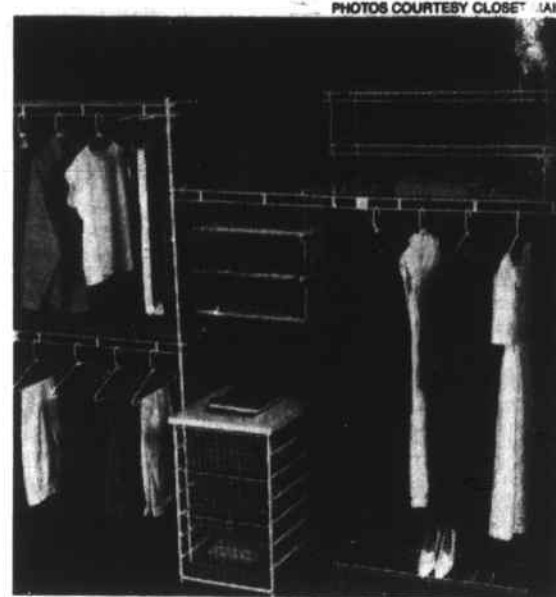

- They're adaptable. Once thought of as purely closet accessories, these products have since moved into every corner of the house - from the garage to the laundry, from the patio to the pantry. Several product lines are available and individual kits can generally be assembled in several different ways. New accessories are being introduced every year.

- They're space-producing. Although new space is never created, these "organizers" enable homeowners to make efficient use of what space there is. In effect, they turn dead space into working space. A kit that replaces the single hanging rod and top shelf in a conventional closet can double, even triple, effective storage space.

With a little imagination, people have been able to do some very creative things with these products, says Mr. Meixel. Narrow storage racks have proved to be particularly popular for their adaptability to doors and walls

Stacking unit can be placed on floor or on existing shelf

Closet organizers capitalize on unused vertical space where conventional shelves would appear clumsy.

"What people need to do is think vertically," Ms. Miley says. "In designing houses we are used to looking at floor plans. So we think in terms of square rather than cubic feet. In concentrating on the floor, we almost forget that rooms have walls as well."

- They're attractive. The open, slender lines of these systems blend pleasingly with all decors, from Swedish modern to New England colonial. They also provide "instant visibility." There's not even momentary confusion, wondering which drawer contains the socks and which one the underwear.

- They're simple to install. All the coated-wire products are readily installed, using nothing more than a drill and a Phillips screwdriver. Some kits include a pattern that, when placed on the wall, shows exactly where screw holes should go.

- They're durable. Steel and vinyl are long-lasting materials that, when combined, make for a very durable product. Closet Maid gives a 10-year limited warranty on all vinyl-covered products and, given normal use, "should last for the life of the house," Miley contends.

- They're relatively inexpensive, particularly for the do-it-yourselfer. Not many homeowners could get what they needed for one-tenth the cost of a professional closet installation, as was the case in the example noted above. With closet sizes ranging widely and with so many accessories available, it is difficult to give average costs. But the common assessment among manufacturers is anywhere from $50 to $250.

Spike heels tough on wooden floors

Ladies, take care of your shoes and you'll take care of your floors.

That's the word from two flooring trade associations who are concerned about the return to vogue of spike or stiletto style heels in women's shoes.

The groups are the Memphis-based National Oak Flooring Manufacturers Association, a 78-year-old organization which sets standards for manufacture of wood flooring, and the National Wood Flooring Association which has headquarters in St. Louis. NWFA embraces all segments of the wood flooring industry - manufacturers, distributors, dealers and installers.

Representatives of both organizations point out that the fashionably high heels (and even styles with wedge heels) contain a steep spike (the equivalent of a blunt 10-penny nail) to strengthen the heel. If the leather or plastic cap is allowed to wear down, or all the way off as frequently happens, the nails holding it and the center spike can become exposed.

The shoe then can cause indentations and scratches, not only in wood flooring but also in less dense resilient materials. Even carpet, terazzo, ceramic and metal surfaces can be damaged.

It has been projected that a two-ton car exerts only 28-30 pounds per square inch of pressure on its supporting surface, a full grown elephant 50-100 PSI, but a 125-pound woman has much as 2000 PSI when taking a normal step. That's because the lady's heel measures only about 1/20th of a square inch in size. Her weight is concentrated in a tiny area and therefore its effect is multiplied many times.

Hardwood flooring manufacturers, according to Walter H. Whitley, acting manager of NOFMA, do not accept damage to floors caused by such heels as incurring a warranty obligation. "Nor do flooring installers," adds Virgil Hendricks of St. Louis, president of NWFA and of a major wood flooring installation company. "Such damage is not the result of manufacturing defects or installation method," Hendricks continues. "Hardwood is a product of nature and therefore susceptible to abuse or mistreatment, and no type of finishing material will, as some people seem to believe, toughen the surface of the wood. In fact, finishes are softer than the wood and thus magnify the damage."

The solution is really quite simple. Just check your heels frequently. When they show signs of wear visit your local shoe repair shop and have new caps or taps (or "lifts" as they're called in the shoe manufacturing and repair industries) put on. The cost is relatively small whereas the cost of sanding and refinishing a wood floor to remove indentations or completely replacing some other type of floor covering is not.

And if that's not a good enough reason for keeping shoe heels in good repair, here's another from a spokesperson for the Footwear Industries of America, Arlington, Va. She points out that exposed nail heads or heel spikes increase the chances of slipping and falling, with the potential for ankle, back or other injury.

So treat your shoes right and you'll help maintain the original beauty and durability of your floors and, perhaps, avoid a painful accident.

What to do when selling your home

The most advantageous sales technique a seller can use is to make certain his property is in tip-top shape before it is placed on the market.

According to the Eastern Middlesex Board of Realtors and the National Association of Realtors, it is much easier to win over prospective buyers who walk through a well-kept yard and into a sparkling clean home.

For a seller, giving buyers a good first impression can mean the difference between choosing from several purchase offers or struggling to attract one nibble.

Preparing a home to be shown does not necessitate a complete, costly makeover. But minor repairs and major cleaning may cut marketing time and add to the seller's net profit from the sale.

The Eastern Middlesex Board of Realtors offers the following selling tips:

-Paint the front door if it needs painting; if it doesn't, at least clean the door. An unsightly entry gives the home a strike even before the buyer has seen the inside.

-Remove all smudges from the walls. If they look dingy, give them a coat of neutral, light-colored paint.

-Clean the floors, vacuum the carpets. If the carpet is dirty or stained, have it cleaned. If the carpet has irremovable pet odors, have it replaced. Leaving it in "as is" condition could give the entire home a "worn-out" look.

-Make sure the closets are tidy, not overflowing with junk. Free of clutter, they will seem more spacious.

-Open the curtains and turn on the lights. Put 75-watt bulbs in the light fixtures and lamps. Touring a well-lit home is far more appealing to prospective buyers than trying to squint their way through dark, gloomy rooms. In fact, they may wonder if the seller is trying to hide problems in the darkness.

-Don't try to cover up defects from buyers or from real estate agents showing the home. For instance, don't nail paneling over a wall stained by plumbing leaks that need repair. If a major fault exists that you don't intend to correct, call it to the agent's attention. Otherwise, you could later be held liable by the buyer for repairing the defect and the resulting problems. If the prospective buyer likes everything else, the fault might not be perceived as a serious drawback. Your forthrightness will be appreciated.

-Scrub, polish and tidy up as though you were expecting guests. You don't want the home shown with unmade beds, dirty dishes in the sink or a ring around the bath tub.

-If possible, take the children — and the pets — and leave before prospects come with a real estate agent to view the home. Generally, people will not take their time looking if the seller is on their heels touting the home's amenities. They may not notice the den's built-in bookcases if they have to step around the kids playing, or if they have to get past a growling dog. And, if they miss assets the first time, they may not be back for a second showing.

If you or other family members won't be there, but the pet will, at least make certain the pet is secured, perhaps outside or in the garage, so it will not bother prospective buyers.

-If it is impossible for you to leave before a showing, refrain from following the buyers around. Don't try to sell the furniture as well as the house, unless you are including it in the sale price. Comments such as "I'm selling the sofa at a yard sale next week" tend to take away from the purpose of the showing. The prospects are interested in your home, not your furniture.

Finally, let your real estate agent do the negotiating. A professional does not have an emotional attachment to the home, and likely is more capable of reasoning objectively with the buyer. In doing so, the agent can knowledgeably discuss price, terms, possession and other factors on your behalf.

Massachusetts Consumer Guide is available

The Better Business Bureau, in cooperation with Governor Dukakis and State Secretary of Consumer Affairs Paula Gold, is distributing thousands of copies of the Fall edition of the 1987 Massachusetts Consumer Resource Guide to consumers throughout the state.

The updated version of The Guide is a thoroughly researched, comprehensive directory of consumer and human service resource agencies at the federal, state and local levels.

Consumers need to know only the subject about which they need assistance. The index directs them to a number of resources which can provide information, referral, and in some cases, direct intervention to resolve problems ranging from consumer issues to housing, legal, and medical questions.

"We are happy to provide this publication to the general public so that the average citizen will know his or her consumer rights and responsibilities, and where to turn at a time of confusion or crisis," said Leonard L. Sanders, President of the BBB, Inc.

Sanders added, "We urge everyone to obtain a copy of the Massachusetts Consumer Resource Guide for use as a ready reference throughout the year."

For a copy of the Fall 1987 Massachusetts Consumer Resource Guide, consumers should send $2.00 which covers postage and handling to Better Business Bureau of the Merrimack Valley, 316 Essex Street, Central Building, Lawrence, Ma. 01840.
